FIX GERMAN MIND TO LET ARMY PASS TO SILESIA

Briand Urges Demand By French And British For Open Path

ALL CORDIAL NOW

Good Understanding Is Of Greatest Import In Present Situation

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 30.—In submitting to the Cabinet the latest British note on the subject of Upper Silesia, according to a semi-official statement, M. Briand outlined his own personal views, which met with the Cabinet's unanimous approval.

While fully concurring in the British opinion that the vital importance of the Entente Cordiale for both nations overshadows all other considerations, French opinion considers that an occasion now offers for a practical demonstration to Germany of the solidarity of the Entente.

It is urged that, pending the decision of the Supreme Council in regard to the Upper Silesia plebiscite, a joint demand by the British and French Ambassadors in Berlin for the provision of facilities for the transportation of Allied troops to the plebiscite area in case of need would be a useful step, as bringing Germany to realise the situation.

All Will Get Square Deal, Says Ll. George

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 1.—Reuter's Agency learns that M. Briand today agreed to the British proposal that the Supreme Council should meet in Paris on Monday next (the 8th inst.). Mr. Lloyd George, Lord Curzon, with other Foreign Office and Cabinet officials, will leave London on Sunday to attend the meeting.

Although the French papers talk of protracted sittings, it is believed in London that the meeting will only last a few days owing to the very urgent business awaiting the British ministers in London. The Italian Premier and Foreign Minister will attend the meeting.

The latest telegrams show that absolute calm prevails in Upper Silesia.

Mr. Lloyd George was cheered in the House of Commons today at question time, when he announced that a satisfactory arrangement had been reached with France for a meeting of the Supreme Council to adjudicate on the results of the Upper Silesian plebiscite.

The first business, he said, was to decide whether, pending the adjudication, the dispatch of reinforcements to the plebiscite area was necessary.

NOTICE SENT GERMANS

The British, French and Italian Ambassadors at Berlin had in the meantime notified the German Government to be ready to facilitate the transit of Allied troops.

Replying to supplementary questions, the Prime Minister said he believed that the reports of the Commissions of Experts which met at Paris last week to examine the lines of the settlement, would be ready by the 8th.

Mr. Josiah Wedgwood, Labor, interjected: "Will the Germans get a straight deal?"

The Prime Minister replied that it was the business of the British Government to see that the Poles and Germans alike got a straight deal.

He added that, according to his belief, the Leipzig trials would be one of the subjects that would be discussed.

COMMITTEE AT WORK

Paris, July 29.—The Committee of Allied experts held its first meeting yesterday to study the question of the Upper Silesian frontier.

This Child's Pet Real Bear Not Of Teddy Variety

Not content with one of the stuffed variety, little Jane Solinsky, of Yosemite, Col., has a real live bear cub for a pet. The cub was found by her father while it was floating down Yosemite Creek, swimming bravely for its life and sending out S. O. S. signals every minute. Mr. Solinsky got the cub ashore and presented it to his daughter. When it grows too big for safety it will be placed in the San Francisco Zoo.

HOUSING PROBLEM TO COME BEFORE OPEN AIR MEETING

Civic League Announces Plan To Bring Matter Before Public

That the public may be more fully informed of the housing problem in the city the Shanghai Civic League last night passed a resolution to hold an open air meeting in one of the public parks in the near future.

Although the meeting last night in the hall of the Royal Asiatic Society was poorly attended those present showed the keenest interest in the discussion of the housing crisis.

Mr. A. J. Hughes, chairman, introduced the question by declaring that scarcity of land and the inflated values resulting, was the cause of the lack of new apartment houses to accommodate the increasing foreign population. There is no immediate prospect of reduction in the price of land. But, said Mr. Hughes, it is possible to impose a tax upon undeveloped land in the Settlement which would make building more profitable than allowing precious land to lie idle. Such measures were taken in England with good results, he said.

Two possible solutions present themselves, said the chairman. Either the political limits of the Settlement will have to be extended, or foreigners will have to be content to live under Chinese jurisdiction. The outlying land can be bought for ridiculously low figures, compared with prices in Shanghai. If the Settlement boundaries could be extended it is likely the Chinese would be given a share in the administration of the newly formed districts.

Mr. Hughes also expressed a possible solution in the building of a suburb on the sea coast connected by tram with Pootung.

Special speakers will address the open air meeting, which will be announced later, on the subject of revision of the land regulations. It is understood a resolution calling for such revision will be brought forward at the next meeting of the ratepayers.

Increase Of Troops Seems To Encourage Hunghutze In Depredations On Railway

Red Bear Bandits Take Toll Of Millions In Property Despite Ten-fold More Guards Than When Russians Patrolled The Tracks

BY A. E. ZUCKER
(Union Medical College, Peking, who is spending his vacation in Siberia for The China Press)

Harbin, July 19.—It was my good fortune here to meet a foreigner high up in the service of the railway and to learn from him absolutely reliable facts in regard to the hunghutze and the Chinese soldiery. These facts are so much to the discredit of the Chinese nation as a nation, as a republic, and as one of the countries desiring to have its voice heard in the settling of world affairs that they deserve serious consideration. They are especially recommended to the attention of those who are loud in complaining how much the Chinese are sinned against by the strong powers. Of course, on the whole it is an old story, but coming from a man who has just returned from the field I believe it will bear repetition.

The Chinese Eastern Railway was formerly guarded by Russian soldiery until two years ago Chinese "soldiers" took over the work of guarding the road and its supplies from robbers. Even during the time when the Russians were protecting the road the hunghutze were an expensive item but the losses were only 10 percent of what they are now, when there are 90 percent more troops on the line than there were formerly. The troops guarding the railway cost the railway $20,000 per month and in one month the robbers have done $150,000 damage. Last year the loss through hunghutzes was 3,600,000 gold roubles—through actual damage ond robbery, blackmail and robbery, blackmail and bribery that had to be paid because of the inefficency of the guards who are afraid ever to leave their cars. On six lumber concessions which were recently visited by inspectors not one Chinese soldier was to be found although fuel and ties to the value of $5,000,000 gold were at the mercy of the robbers. To run the trains fuel is required, and in order to save the situation somehow bribes must be paid. And with a heavy sigh my informant told me that it would probably cost 1,000,000 roubles gold this winter.

TO BRIBE OR TO QUIT

Of course, to pay bribes is a bad policy, but with Chang Tso-lin and the Tuchun of Kirin in command of the troops and the responsibility resting nowhere—what can you do? A case of paying bribes to robbers or giving up running the traffic. In the days of Russian guards bribes were paid also, but the demands were so modest that it was no very serious matter. The robbers did not dare ask much, because if they did they knew that the Russians would come to clean them up.

The lumber contractors find themselves suddenly confronted, to cite one typical example, with 5,000 hunghutze who are hungry and want something to eat. The contractor rations them and calls for aid. Chinese troops in large numbers are rushed to the scene—and the contractor must feed them also, for the money that was to go toward feeding the troops has gone elsewhere, and as someone once observed, a man must live. Then an official of the road goes down to look into the matter and is given "selected troops," only to find that they break into and loot the stores of food on the concession. My informant told me that he didn't trust any of the Chinese troops, he took ten Russians who were ample protection against five to seven hundred robbers, even though the Russians were unarmed. But the robbers knew that white men show fight, and they left them alone.

WALA WALA WARS

The Chinese officials speak of great battles which are being fought, but generally all they shoot off is their mouths. The biggest battle of the two years was described to me, the battle than which there never was anything more bloody and desperate in all the history of these wars on the hunghutze. A very clever and very unusual officer had made a stratagic coup and surrounded completely a band of robbers. In his military enthusiasm he commanded his troops to fire, and they fired. Probably the robbers were very much surprised, but what could they do but fire back. And after a lot of powder had gone up in smoke the commander of the troops found to his exasperation, surprise, and chagrin, not to speak of terror and possible nausea, that seven of his men were killed and wounded. This was getting serious and really quite rough. So he called a halt of the firing, opened a breach in his lines and allowed the robbers to get out before they would kill any more of his men. This was very nice on the part of the officer, but an officer's life is a hard one, some of his men came to him

Starving Troops Start Westward March To Escape From Famine

FOREIGNER HELD FOR $1,000 THEFT AT H'KONG BANK

Supposed Austrian Caught With Notes By Capt. C. C. Williams

A daring attempt at robbery in the Hongkong and Shanghai bank was thwarted shortly before noon yesterday when Captain C. C. Williams, of the steamer Woosung, captured a foreigner, thought to be an Austrian, who had snatched a $1,000 packet of notes from a handbag at the paying teller's counter.

Captain Williams had just received $2,000 in notes, wrapped in two packages, and had placed them in the hand bag. As he turned to speak to the clerk he heard a rustling and turned to discover that the bag was open and one bundle of notes was gone. The foreigner was the only one close enough to have snatched the money and he was immediately seized and searched and the missing notes were found in his hat.

Questioned by the police the man gave his name as Yan Novak and claimed Polish citizenship. The Polish Consular authorities, however, refused him recognition and he will appear in the Mixed Court today.

Novak, who is 28 years old, is said to have fought in the Austrian army at the outbreak of the war and to have been captured by the Russians, subsequently joining the Bolshevik cause. He claims to have taken out Polish naturalisation papers. From documents in his possession it is learned that he has been at various times in Shanghai, Peking, Tientsin and Harbin and it is thought that he was for a time in Japan.

Why Broil Abroad When You Can Boil At Home?

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 31.—Mr. Tang Tsai-fu, Minister at Rome, inspired by the historic example of President Wilson, has telegraphed to the Government suggesting that President Hsu should visit Washington and take part in the Pacific Conference. It is reported that President Hsu at once declined to consider the proposal.

HUGE OPIUM HAUL MADE BY POLICE IN TIENDONG ROAD

Find Nearly Two Tons Of Drug Disguised As Beer; Three Arrested

One of the biggest seizures of smuggled opium ever accomplished in Shanghai occurred Monday night when police of Hongkew station raided a house at 349 Tiendong Road and found nearly two tons of the drug, over $300,000 worth, packed in beer and soap cases and evidently ready for shipment or just arrived in the Settlement.

A Cantonese found on the premises was placed under arrest and subsequently two others were taken into custody.

Word having reached the police that the building in question was being used as a godown for the storage of smuggled opium a guard was placed about it while a Mixed Court search warrant was applied for and issued. Chief Inspector McGregor and Detective Sergeants Ashley, Conduit and Schmidt then raided the house. The opium, both raw and prepared, was found packed in four beer cases and thirty-four large bundles obviously intended to pass as containers of soap. The total weight of the drug seized is 3,762 pounds.

The three men arrested will be tried in the Mixed Court and the police are at present looking for others involved. Indications are that the seizure may lead to the breaking up of a formidable ring of smugglers who have been shipping opium both out of and into the Settlement.

Angora Still Wants War; Greeks Make Triumphal Entry

(Reuter's Service)

Athens, August 1.—King Constantine and the Premier, M. Gounaris, today made a ceremonial entry into Eskishehr, the recent capture of which town by the Greeks caused Greek military circles to express the belief that the war against the Kemalists was practically at an end.

A solemn thanksgiving service was conducted by the Greek Metropolitan, after which the King reviewed the troops.

Constantinople, August 1.—Reports from Asia Minor indicate an increasing intimacy in Turkish and Soviet relations. Generals Bgusiloff and Neklidoff have arrived in Angora and Sivas, respectively.

It is reported that the Soviet is selecting soldiers belonging to the Moslem faith for despatch to Anatolia to help the Kemalists.

London, July 2.—According to an Angora message received in Paris, the National Assembly there has affirmed its intention of continuing the war against Greece until ultimate victory is achieved, and the Government will continue its mobilisation and organisation with a view to carrying out a winter campaign.

The Assembly has decided not to ask the Allies to intervene until the termination of the present war.

On the other hand, Reuter's Athens correspondent telegraphs that a semi-official announcement speaks of an expedition being organised against the town of Angora, and the new Greek advance is expected to begin within a fortnight.

Enrico Caruso, World's Greatest Tenor, Is Dead

(Reuter's Service)

NAPLES, August 2.—The death has occurred, at the age of 48 years, of the celebrated tenor, Cav. Enrico Caruso.

Caruso suffered a trying operation last winter, which kept him an invalid all spring, and threatened the loss of his voice. Upon sailing for Italy in May, in company with Mrs. Caruso, formerly Miss Benjamin of New York, and their child Giona, he gave every evidence of speedy convalescene.

The loss to the music world occasioned by his death is incalculable. For nearly twenty years he has been supreme, the tenor without a peer. His contract with the Metropolitan Opera company has been continuous since 1904.

Caruso began to sing in the choruses of Naples, his native city, at the age of 11. He made his debut in 1894 at the Nuovo Theater in "L' Amico Francesco," when he was but 21. He then toured Italy and Sicily, and sang four seasons in La Scala of Milan.

Throughout the great cities of Europe Caruso was hailed as the greatest tenor Italy had produced. Coming to the United States in 1903 he made his first appearance as Rhadames in "Aida," and scored a tremendous success. Some of his other famous roles were Rudolph in "La Boheme," along with Sembrich and Scotti when that opera was introduced to New York in 1907, and "Faust" with Geraldine Ferrar in 1913. He sang Don Jose in the revival of "Carmen," 1915, when Ferrar, Alda and Amato and he made the cluster of stars.

For Mere Ease Of Living China Has World Beaten

By Elsie McCormick

"CHINA always takes more away from you than it gives."

This pessimistic remark, which we hear stated first by a person smitten with homesickness for the pageant of Fifth Avenue, the glow of the Washington Square lights through a veil of rain, the queer little restaurants that modestly hide away below the level of the sidewalls, and a real soda-fountain where one can get "sundaes" with fancy names, is repeated so often that we feel inclined to put a pin through it and bring out the microscope.

Is it true that the average foreigner who lives for a time in China loses more by the experience than he gains?

In the matter of health, he undoubtedly pays aheavy price. We have never yet heard of anyone whose physical condition was bettered by life in the Orient, though we know of hundreds who paid a tax on health ranging from chronic invalidism to a loss of energy and a few vagrant ills of an indefinable character.

LOSE THOSE ROSY CHEEKS

Despite their comparatively easy life, women almost invariably fade earlier than those at home. Hair falls out in exasperating handfuls, natural color gives way sooner or later to the kind of blushes that are likely to be deeper on one cheek than on the other, depending on the position of the mirror, eyelids show a tendency to droop heavily, and lines etch themselves at eye and mouth despite the most persistent efforts of the massage amah.

During the space of a year in the Far East, the average woman ages as much physically as she would in five years at home. After she has become acclimated, her facial deterioration is less rapid, but she never regains the youthful freshness that was hers when she first sailed. Newcomers in the Orient nearly always remark on the many tired, drawn faces to be seen even among the young girls and the lack of complections made by corpusales instead of by chemists.

Concerning health and appearance, therefore, China is a gourmet. It devours without making the slightest return, calling a long death-roll every year, sending others home so broken that all the patience of medical science can't quite put the physical Humpty-Dumpty together again, and causing the tea-table friends of many women to remark, "My dear, she says she's only thirty-two, but I'd hate to have been hanging since she was forty-five!"

TALK IS TOO FREE

The grip that health problems have upon the mind of the foreigner in China is proved that by fact that disorders which at home were mentioned only in a consulting room become parlor topics in the Far East.

Neophytes who turn the various colors of the spectrum while symptoms are discussed in a mixed group are among the most interested contributors to the conversation after they have had a little experience of their own. It is astonishing how much of the social discourse in China concerns disease, diets, cautions regarding fruit, and the terrible experience of some friend who wasn't properly inoculated.

Though even the most ardent lover of China would never defend the country from a health standpoint, opinions are divided on the subject of its effect on business ability. Many claim that a man has far greater opportunities to show his worth—that a young and inexperienced employe can achieve a degree of responsibility beyond his wildest dreams at home.

On the other hand, the slower working pace is said to be a serious hindrance after the employe returns and tries to enter into competition with these who have never left the brisker at-

FIGHTING IS STARTING ON BORDER AND HUNAN WINS

Wu Pei-fu Believed To Have Made Bargain With Chao

TELLS WANG QUIT

Minor Revolts Stirred Up To Hasten Tuchun In Abdication

(Staff Wire To The China Press)

Peking, August 2.—The defiant attitude of Chiang Kwei-ti, veteran Tartar-general of Jehol, in prohibiting the entry of Chang Tso-lin's troops into his territory is fast precipitating another war in North China. Chang is now resolved to crush the little general in China's district of Imperial Tombs and has asked Tsao Kun, his rival, to remain neutral in his proposed campaign.

While Jehol's lean division is in no way equal to Chang's massive army and modern equipment, Chiang's men are expected to put up a stiff fight for their cause. As the oldest militarist in China belonging to the conservative school, Chiang has many loyal disciples.

Tsao Kun's friendship and respect for Chiang Kwei-ti is by no means superficial. Many of his ablest lieutenants were once petty officers in Chiang's camp. With the Hunan-Hupeh conflict daily increasing the spirit of rivalry between Chihli and Fengtien, the Fengtien-Jehol crisis may serve as another spark which will kindle the fire hidden in the bosoms of the Chihli and Fengtien factions.

Jehol Tartar General May Start A New War

(Staff Wire To The China Press)

Hankow, August 2 (1:50 p.m.)—Intermittent fighting between Hunanese and Hupeh troops is being staged along the Hunan and Hupeh borders, resulting in repulses of the Hupeh forces.

Reports are current that General Wu Pei-fu; the man of the hour, has arrived at an understanding with General Chao Heng-ti, leader of the invading troops.

It is further understood that Wu has admonished Tuchun Wang Chan-yuan of Hupeh to retire from his post. Minor revolts among Wang's own troops are being stirred up within the province in order to hasten Wang's retirement.

The local situation is quiet. Wang has again asked Peking to despatch four airplanes for his defense, despite the refusal of the Aeronautical Department to do so on account of the stipulations of the airplanes loan with Messrs. Vickers Company.

In a personal interview with your correspondent, General Hsiao Yao-nan, commander of the 25th division and General Wu Pei-fu's personal representative, stated that his sole purpose of marching his division to Hupeh was to preserve peace and avert war between Hupeh and Hunan by checking the invasion of the Hunanese.

Chang Tso-Lin Now Is Undetermined Factor

BY JOSEF W. HALL
(Special Correspondent of THE CHINA PRESS)

Chengchow, Honan, July 31.—The indeterminate factor in the process of internal political realignment is no longer Wu Pei-fu. In the interview accorded me Saturday he made his position and intentions clear enough. His declaration was probably sincere and certainly complete.

Hunan will not likely clash with him. It seems almost a physical impossibility for Kwangtung and the Sun faction to project any offensive against the Wuhan cities. The resignation of Tuchun Wang Chan-yuan, following the subsidence of the Hunan threat, is probable. The succession of a henchman of Wu Pei-fu is equally likely. The permanent stationing in the Wuhan region of the bulk of Wu Pei-fu's military power is foreshadowed in the Deputy Inspector-General's conversation with me.

The indeterminate factor is not Wu but Chang Tso-lin. Does the Fengtien lord feel impelled at this time to checkmate the spread of Wu's influence over the Yangtze region? Chang is none too pleased at the supercession of his influence in Shensi by that of Wu. He is believed by Wu's men to be at present encouraging the resistance of Chen Shu-fan and other irreconcilable factions there.

OPPOSED TO WU

He knows that Wu considers him the greatest obstruction to China's progress. Will fear for his security allow him to refrain from an endeavor to frustrate the increase of Wu's power?

Wu made it clear to me that he intended to have no extraneous element intertering with his sole command of the northern expeditionary forces to Hupeh. Chang Tso-lin is talking of sending his Manchurian hordes into Hupeh. He should be well equipped, with the funds and supplies which he has mulcted from Peking for his fake Mongolian expedition.

It is well remembered how Chang Tso-lin let Wu Pei-fu do the fighting against the Anfus at Peking last year, then threw his forces into the arena in such number that he was able to take the victory and the situation completely out of General Wu's hands. I happened to be in the camp of the commanding officer of the vanguard of the Chihli troops south of the walls of Peking when the first word arrived that Chang's fresh Manchurians were pressing past the battle-worn Chihli-ites into Twanho, Nanyuan and Peking itself. I shall not forget the looks and expressions of keen disappointment on the faces of the Chihli officers.

WU'S WINDWARD ANCHOR

General Wu Pei-fu is, I believe, determined to prevent a repetition of this ruse of Chang Tso-lin's in the Wuhan region. He has, with a view to eventualities, made friends with the masters of Inner Mongolia, in Chang Tso-lin's rear, and whom Chang, in spite of Peking's mandates, has been unable to dominate.

Chiang Kwei-ti in Kalgan and Jehol will assist anyone who opposes Chang Tso-lin. General Ma Fu-hsiang, big Moslem chief of Kansu, Tutung of Suiyuan, commander of the Moslem cavalry, and the first division of Chihli troops in Suiyuan, is now at Wu Pei-fu's invitation, visiting the Vice Inspector at Honanfu. He came down in a special train which is waiting for him here at Changchow, having visited Tsao Kun enroute.

The question is now "will Chang Tso-lin call for a showdown?"

Dr. Sun Appoints Ma As Kwangsi's Ruler

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Canton, Aug. 1.—The appointment by Dr. Sun Yat-sen of Mr. Ma Chun-wu as Civil Governor of Kwangsi is gazetted.

Nanning Still Held By Wong Poi-Kwai

Hongkong, Aug. 1.—General Wong Poi-kwai, the Kwangsi'te commander, has telegraphed to General Chen Chiung-ming, stating that the Kwangsi forces will be disbanded in two weeks' time, and requesting the Cantonese not to advance on Lungchow, in order to avoid a conflict.

Later, however, it is reported that General Wong Poi-kwai is refusing to hand over Nanning to the Cantonese, and is stationing large Kwangsiite forces at various strategical points in order to defend Nanning against the Cantonese.

General Chen Chiung-ming is dispatching troops and aeroplanes against Nanning, to demand the surrender of the Tuchun's seals of office and the disbandment of the Kwangsi forces.

Kweichow Troops To Join Fight At Yochow

Peking, Aug. 2.—The situation between Hunan and Hupeh has again become acute. The most recent foreign telegrams from Hankow report that two thousand Kweichow forces were expected at Yochow on July 31. Fresh Hunan forces are said to be reaching the front while Hupeh is rushing up reinforcements.

Fighting is reported to have occurred at Shihlipai on July 30 and 31, the result of which has not been reported. According to Chinese official messages however the Hupeh troops triumphed.

General Sun Chuan-fang, General Wang Chan-yuan's Chief of Staff, has reached the front and heavy fighting is expected today.

Hongkong, Aug. 2.—General Chen Chiung-ming has telegraphed to General Wong Poi-kwai, requesting him to declare the severance of his relations with General Lu Yung-ting; furthermore, to intercept and disarm all defeated Kwangsi troops prior to their disbandment, and to submit a report concerning the Kwangsi forces at Nanning, in order to prevent a conflict when the Cantonese enter the city.

At Any Rate You Can Die Easy In Luxurious China

mosphere. Many who came out to China only for a time return to the Far East very precipitately after a tussle in an office plastered with such matters as, "Do it now," "Make it brief," "This is our busy day and so is every other."

AND NOW TO BALANCE

China subtracts beauty, physical endurance, and mental energy, but she repents of her harshness by turning fairy godmother and bringing every one not born with a golden spoon in his mouth a little realisation of his early dreams. Who during the novel reading age of his teens has not been impressed by the velvet footed servants, the functionary who deftly moves about in a milieu of linen and silver, bringing in delectable dishes prepared by another personage behind the butler's pantry?

What stenographer, shivering out of bed at six o'clock to darn the hole in her silk stocking just above the shoe line or to "do up" some blouses which she wouldn't dare trust to the rollers in the steam laundry, what stenographer, we repeat, has not thought wistfully of the novel under her pillow in which Amelie brings in the heroine's breakfast and then lays out her dainty clothes for the day.

And what wife of the middle class does not know that the magazine pictures showing a lady washing dishes in a machine with an evening dress on are bitter delusions? And that the heavy-footed Hungarian cook who received her training in a munition factory is a poor substitute for the velvet pedalled servants of her early dreams?

LIVES IN LUXURY

But here in China even the humblest stenotypist can have her breakfast brought upstairs, her garments for the day laid out on the chair, her dress buttoned up the back and her clothes mended for the mere pittance of twelve Mexican dollars a month. To be sure, her servant doesn't say "Oui, Madame," or wear a cap with frills like the picture of Amelie in the novel, but she is sufficient justification for casual references to "my maid" in letters to he girl friends at home.

The wife who always longed to say "Home, James" to a servant in livery has her wish gratified in China, even though his name isn't James, and he acts as combined horsepower and chauffeur, and his livery from the waist up is too universal to be distinctive.

China's function as a fulfiller of dreams and its power to put middle class people through the motions of luxury is by no means as trivial as it sounds. In the minds of many, this one gift alone outweighs the thefts of youth, good looks and physical well being.

DREAM BOY STODGY

The extent of some of China's other gifts is observable when the former resident goes back to his home town. The most promising boy of his class who married the prettiest girl and settled down to a rosy future in the local bank seems dull and stodgy now.

Whenever the returned sojourner in the Orient speaks of the problem of Urga or Manchuria, somebody begins a conversation about J. William Peabody's candidacy for Justice of the Peace. If he speaks of China's famines, somebody is reminded of the increase in the price of rump steak at John Smith's store and the consequent silk dress worn by Mrs. Smith. After a few such remarks, he suddenly realises that he has outgrown his clan, and that his interests have so expanded that they can never again be fitted into the narrow groove of the friends he left behind him. By living in China, one lives also in England, Russia, Portugual and France, for contact with these many nationalities plays as large a part in the broadening process as contact with the Chinese themselves.

For another thing, he is spared forever that urge of repressed and cheated wanderlust that torments either vaguely or acutely these who remain at home. The man who accepts no matter how excellent a positon in his own town or city becomes conscious after a time of a vague discontent, a feeling of having missed something worth while, a resentment toward family or business obligations that keep him chained to his post.

ALAS! THESE DREAMS

He dreams hopelessly of strange islands, under a yellow moon, of the silvered track of the sea, of temples standing by placid lakes, and of the distant, half-heard confusion of a marketplace in the shadow of a minaret.

He reads steamer schedules under the dining room lamp while pretending to look at the sporting section, wondering meanwhile why under the sun he married when he might have followed the long road of his dreams.

When he has grown very much older, he sometimes realises his ambition by joining an organised tour, but he learns then that he is far too late, that worry about cleanly food far outbalances any joy in the artistic beauty of moon-gates, that strange beds are distasteful, and that no temple or mountain peak in the world is worth a quiet hour by the window of his hotel.

There are few sights more pathetic than a group of elderly tourists being patiently conducted to temple, pagoda, and beggar fair, trying to recapture the faded gold of their dream adventures, but consumed with worry on the subjects of possible rheumatism, bronchitis, cholera and indigestion.

The person who has lived in China never experiences that painful ingrowing wanderlust, nor does his chance to see something of the world occur after he has lost his capacity to enjoy it.

So, after all, does China take away more than it gives?

What do you think about it?

JAPANESE ISSUE RIFLES TO WARD OFF TERRORISTS

Railway Militia Are Given Arms While Port Is Being Patrolled

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, Aug. 2.—Despite the continuance of acts of terrorism, the position here is improving. The Japanese authorities have taken over the guarding of the railway, town and suburbs, and strong patrols of Japanese have been stationed at vital points. The Japanese have issued 400 rifles to the railway militia.

It is reported that Japanese capitalists are loaning the Government several million yen on the security of Government goods.

Ungern Still At Large Is Negligible Factor

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 31.—Notwithstanding the report that General Ungern is still at large in Outer Mongolia, General Chang Tso-lin appears confident that no fighting on the part of the Chinese will be required as a preliminary to regaining control. In a telegram sent by General Chang to the Central Government he felicitates the Government on the prompt measures taken to clear up the trouble in Hupeh, adds that three of his brigades are stationed along the Peking-Mukden Railway, ready to obey the orders of the Government in the event of their being required on the Yangtze, and concludes by saying that he has instructed General Chang Tsung-chang to go to Kiakta, accompanied by Mr. Li Yuan.

Meanwhile General Chi Chen-chung, accompanied by Mr. Huang Chen-hsu, will proceed direct to Urga. General Chang does not say what forces will go with these missions, but he anticipates that the Reds will hand over the administration of Urga to them.

GAYNOR'S ALIBI IS SUSTAINED; IS ACQUITTED

Customs Man Held Not Guilty Of Charge Of Assaulting Chinese Chauffeur

Jack Gaynor, Customs officer, who was accused of assaulting a Chinese chauffeur and whose trial in the United States Court for China attracted general public interest by reason of a remarkable conflict in the testimony given, was acquitted of the charge yesterday in a decision that was handed down by Judge C. S. Lobingier.

According to the testimony given at the trial by five Chinese and two foreigners, Gaynor accompanied by three companions at the Del Monte Cafe ordered a car from the Western Garage some time after midnight on the morning of July 11. The Chinese chauffeur testified that after being refused permission to drive the car, Gaynor assaulted him, throwing him from the car and beating and kicking him. Two foreign employes at the Del Monte and three Chinese bar boys testified that Gaynor had been in the Del Monte at the time stated in the charge and they supplied details concerning the ordering of the car. A chit for the car also was produced and Gaynor admitted that the signature it bore was his, but he said he believed it was a chit he had signed at some other time.

Denying the charge Gaynor testified that from midnight on the morning of July 11 until 6 o'clock the following morning he had been on duty aboard the steamer Fengtien. This testimony was supported by R. B. Martin, A. E. Hansen and W. Stellingwerff who said they had seen Gaynor on the steamer at various times through the period he said he was aboard the ship and customs records were produced to show that he had signed on duty about midnight and off duty at 6 o'clock the morning of July 11.

Gaynor testified further that he did not know how to drive an automobile. In the course of the hearing the prosecution sought to strengthen its case by showing that Gaynor had sought to keep the matter out of Court and had offered to pay for any damage done to the car and for medical treatment the chauffeur had been given.

The prosecution was conducted by Mr. H. D. Rodger, Special United States District Attorney and Mr. J. W. Schoenfeld appeared for the defense.

Red Beards Gain In Prowess As The Soldiers Increase

and complained—a Chinese private is always free to argue with a colonel—and the officer began to feel badly once more. His troops were not on his high moral level, and to pacify them for having allowed the quarry to escape he had to pay every private one dollar Mex. and thus ended the great battle in which a detachment of robbers were almost annihilated by the military skill of an exceptional Chinese officer. "This is no fairy tale" was the way in which my informant prefaced his remarks, which goes to prove once more that truth is stranger than official reports.

DON'T RESPECT OFFICERS

"The trouble is the soldiers have no confidence in and no respect for their officers. The officers are men who have the barest rudiments of military science—no, that saying too much, what shall I say, they are men in uniforms commanding armed coolies. Neither soldiers nor officers have ever been trained, there is no discipline whatever. It's simply not in a Chinese to fight. I admire them as workers, they are diligent and clever, but Lord! they certainly have no guts whatever."

"But the hunghutze," I asked, "they must be brave fighters to attack all these posts and to terrorise the military in this way?"

"No, they're not fighters, they're commercial people. They expose themselves just as little as possible, just enough to scare the soldiers, and that doesn't take much. They hate to fight. I've seen some of them that were captured by our men. They have soft hands and long fingernails, but they wear coolie clothes. They are business men. There was 1,800,000 roubles' worth of wood they threatened to set fire to unless they got $50,000. Well, we're now trying to settle for $30,000. Ah, it would drive you wild! The Chinese have a household motto, 'Better have no son at all than have a son who is a soldier,' and they certainly live up to it!"

Opera Tomorrow

Verdi's "Il Trovatore" will be sung by the Russian Opera company at the Lyceum theater tomorrow night. The farewell performance will be given Saturday night with a program of the first act of "La Boheme," the second act of "Mignon," and a ballet. The company has gained many friends in Shanghai during the season of two months, and sails for Japan with the good wishes for success of all who heard its splendid repertoire.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

It has been brought to our notice that certain dealers in Mineral Waters, taking advantage of the present heat wave, and consequent enormous demand for Aerated Waters, are extracting an increased price for our products, amounting in some cases to as much as 100%. This is profiteering of the worst description and our customers should refuse to put up with it. We should feel greatly obliged if they would notify us of any such cases, so that we may be able to deal with the parties concerned.

It is needless to add that we ourselves have not increased our prices one cent.

AMERICAN PRESS IN SYRIA GREAT POWER FOR GOOD

as Led Race Of 150,000 000 People Through Darkness Into Dawn

OPENED RELIEF CHANNELS

Brotherhood Center On Shores Of Arab Asia Is Soon To Celebrate Centenary

BY C. A. DANA
(Manger of American Press of Beirut)

The oldest American institution in foreign lands is the American Press at Beirut, Syria. This printing house will celebrate its centenary a few months hence—Feb. 10, 1922. In anticipation of the raising of a centenary fund of $300,000 for an enlarged plant and modern equipment, the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions at No. 156 Fifth Avenue has underwritten $100,000 of that sum for immediate use in purchasing equipment.

TO REDEEM TURKEY

While the first pioneers were exploring the great regions west of the Mississippi, conquering the tribes of savage Indians and blazing a trail for civilisation, another group of American pioneers with the same spirit of discovery were exploring the ancient East. This second group chose the most daring and difficult of all the unsolved problems of Asia, the penetration and education of Turkey and Arabia.

The names of Pliny Fisk and Levi Parsons are to the East what those of Lewis and Clark are to the West. Their first discovery in penetrating the Turkish Empire in Western Asia was that there existed a number of intelligent races, highly developed, fearless but friendly, peoples whose past had been perpetuated by deeply fascinating lore of legends and traditional history, for the most part handed down from one generation to another but with almost no literature in any printed form.

The Mohammedan, Hebrew and native Christian leaders had their sacred writings in their own languages, but aside from ecclesiastic and religious books there was no literature in the hands of the common people and no schools.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION

The master stroke of these two pioneers, Fisk and Parsons, was in founding a printing house to give the Greek, Armenian, Kurd, Persian, Arab and Egyptian each aliterature which would free him from the thraldom of religious fanatics.

But they found the East many hundreds of years behind in the march of civilisation and resentful of foreign intrusion. Their work was most bitterly opposed in the beginning by the Oriental Christians, and later these Christians incited the Mohammedan Governors to hostile activity.

Fisk and Parsons were soon joined by Jonas King, Eli Smith, Thompson, Goodell, and Van Dyck, who made survey of the country and prepared suitable literature for opening schools and founding churches.

They found it necessary to locate for a time on the Island of Malta, and there began their translating and editorial work. After several attempts to land their printing equipment at different points on the Mediterranean coast they succeeded in getting ashore at Beirut and soon had a first class printing house at work producing books, scientific literature, Bibles, etc., in the Greek, Armenio-Turkish and Arabic languages.

This was the first attempt ever made to reproduce the Arabic language from type for use among the common people. In 1833 Eli Smith went to Leipzig and there prepared the most beautiful font of Arabic type the world has ever seen. The matrices were taken to Syria and have been used in manufacturing hundreds of tons of type for use throughout the Arabic speaking world.

The tremendous power of the printed page was soon recognised. Stories, leaflets, school books and preachments were turned out by tens of thousands, and before the Turks realised it the influence of the American Press was such that they had to recognise this institution as a positive factor in a program of education. The simple activities they at first permitted because its work seemed too trival to be regarded as having any dangerous effect could not now be suppressed.

CHARTERED BY SULTAN

The American Press then made its appeal to the Sultan of Turkey for official recognition, which was given in the form of a firman, or charter, signed by the Sultan himself, "an irrevocable recognition of the rights of the American Press to edit and produce and distribute printed knowledge according to the customs of civilisation as adopted by the Western world."

There was a Turkish censor, of course, but he usually cared more for the good will of the Americans than he did for the professed enlightenment of the Turkish political leaders and rarely made trouble unless his vigilance was called in question, and then his objections were often only for effect.

Thus the circle of influence of the Press was gradually enlarged. In 1862 Dr. Cornelius Van Dyck completed the first accepted translation of the Bible into the Arabic language. This book stands today among Christians and Mohammedans as one of the most beautiful literary productions in their language.

With the growth of American missions in Turkey and the incoming of British, French's and Danish Missions, the work of the American Press increased. Demands were made for large quantities of school books covering every phase of educational requirements, beginning with the primary grades and continuing up through complete college courses. Dictionaries were prepared, hymn books with the Arabic music, books on medicine and surgery and all branches of scientific teaching.

It is a great tribute to the unwavering purpose of the men who have controlled the policy of this remarkable institution that through the various changes which have come as the Press has passed from one form of control to another they have never lost sight of its original purpose —"to publish literature which would contribute to the intellectual, social, physical and spiritual development of the races of the Near East, that it should ever be a positive force dispelling ignorance, superstition and fanaticism and seeking to promote a spirit of brotherhood, tolerance and good will toward men."

The American Press has in its century of service been forced to fight its way up through years of discouraging reverses, through war, massacres, pestilence and famine and the vicissitudes of the Turkish Empire. Its buildings and grounds have on several occasions been the only shelter for thousands of refugees fleeing from the fire and sword of the despotic Turk.

MANY-SIDED USEFULNESS

An American or Englishman going for the first time to Syria might hear at the different ports of call along the Mediterranean Coast varying accounts of this printing institution. In one case the magic name American Press means a financial clearing house for all foreign institutions in that country.

Mission organisations, archaeological societies, relief societies, no matter in what part of the country they operate, use the Press as their bank and clearing house; they know it also as the bureau through which they purchase their tickets and arrange their steamship sailings.

The medical missionary in the interior knows it as the agency which supplies him with his hospital and pharmacy equipment and such food and clothing as he must purchase abroad.

The Principal of the mission high school in the interior knows the American Press as the agency which supplies all school equipment, from the materials for erecting his building to blackboard and books.

The Y. M. C. A. secretary sent out to establish that department of work which has grown to such proportions in the Western world calls upon the Press to select and purchase the site for his new building and to help him in his publicity and financial campaign.

And all of them know the American Press as a great brotherhood center on the shores of Arab-Asia, with an open hand and a welcoming voice to every foreigner, whether educator, missionary, Red Cross, Near East Relief, Standard Oil or Chamber of Commerce coming to Syria for the benefit intellectually spiritually, socially or commercially of this great race of 150,000,000 peoples speaking the Arabic language.

When the great war involved the Turkish Empire and placed her on the side of Germany, which all Americans felt was the losing side, their sympathies were for the most part with the Syrian people, who for so many centuries have been a subject race and the object of much brutal treatment on the part of the Turks.

The American Press, having proved its ability to supply the needs of the people in many and varying forms, was daily thronged by Syrians who told the story of their relative living in Egypt, South America or the United States, and upon whom they were dependent for living. The banking systems of Syria had broken down, mail communications had been suspended, the telegraph systems were controlled by the Turk, and already his heavy hand was ruthlessly requisitioning food, clothing and all facilities of transport, thus threatening the people with the severest economic discomforts.

The manager of the Press in Beirut and the Treasurer of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions in New York exchanged a few apparently harmless cablegrams couched in American slang or referring to some historic question—in reality, a clear statement of conditions, with instruction or suggestion as to necessary action. Means were found of opening channels for relief which would enable the half million Syrians in the United States and practically the same number in South America and Egypt to remit funds to their unfortunate relatives or friends then under siege in Syria.

The story of the trials and difficulties of the manager and staff of the American Press can not be told in a few words. That story has been written up elsewhere. It is sufficient to say that from Aug. 1, 1914, up to the present the Press has stod by and championed the rights of the Syrian people in their struggle against the barbarous cruelties of the Turk and German. And through the terrible periods of famine and disease, during those awful days of the war, located and identified tens of thousands of the Syrians living in hundreds of isolated villages scattered through the country from Egypt to Mesopotamia to whom money had been sent by relatives in foreign lands.

During those interminable years of tribulation the simple looking printing house in its ancient building disbursed to the starving population of Syria more than $20,000,000 without the loss of one penny.

GREEDY TURKS BAFFLED

The Turks recognised the help the Syrians were receiving and regarded the American Press as an obstacle to their policy of extermination. They had their revenge and confiscated some of the machinery and supplies, searching the safes and premises for records or correspondence, but they had been outwitted; all of those valuable documents, money, etc., were reposing peacefully beneath a tombstone in a cemetery.

The Turk likes to have a hand in every enterprise where any quantity of money is being handled, so the Governor of Beirut thought his share in the financial transactions for the Syrians should be forthcoming. He set the figure at $50,000, which he demanded of the manager of the Press and threatened imprisonment, court material and even worse if the sum were not immediately paid. It was not, and the manager spent a year in exile in various parts of the empire, some of the time in the frozen regions of Anatolia and after that, until the breakdown of the Turkish regime, in the vile dungeons of old Stamboul on the shores of the Bosphorus. But with the arrival of the first British flag in the Turkish capital the manager went back to Syria, from which the Turk had been expelled—the land in which Turk and Arab, let us hope, will never meet again.

With the "Dawn of a New Era in Syria" and the fear of Turkish oppresion forever gone, the Syrian is developing a national spirit. A great hunger has arisen for literature. The American Press, aided by the schools and colleges and mission organisations throughout the land, have in the last 100 years been engaged in silent but effective work.

AMERICAN UNSUSPECTED

The American is the only individual in Syria whose presence is not regarded as having political significance. He is trusted and loved by the Syrian because he is there to give, uplift and educate. He occupies the most enviable position to which any one could hope to attain. He has the implicit confidence and the undying gratitude of a nation 50 percent greater in number than our own great United States of America, and a people capable in a generation or two of developing into as strong and fine a race as can be discovered.

The American Press at Beirut is the only institution in Syria which has never been subsidized, which has met its reverses successfully through its ability to supply a real need among the people. It has never made one penny of profit because it has given its services without cost to a worthy people. It has been the greatest civilising factor in the Arabic speaking world.

ARABIC LINOTYPE MACHINE

The first Arabic linotype machine for Syria will be shipped from Brooklyn shortly together with quantities of other printing machinery, and when these are in operation will bring Arab-Asia a step nearer to its closest national friend, "The Nation of Freedom," as the United States is known in that land.

Arab-Asia (Syria, Palestine, Arabia and Mesopotamia) has been delivered from the despotism of the Turk, and for the first time a spirit of patriotism and national pride has been given birth in the hearts of the most highly develop race in the Near East. Under the humane guidance of the British in Egypt, Palestine, Arabia and Irak and under the French in Lebanon (Northern Syria) these people of the land where the race of man first developed the fine civilisation which today is ours, will have the opportunity of becoming one of the strongest nations of the future.

The new day has brought a great thirst for education and has filled to overflowing every American school and college; the demands upon the American Press for literature upon every conceivable subject has forced the management to develop plans for greatly multiplying the output.

It is doubtful if there is another American printing house in the world with so fine a record of service and accomplishment in helping to break down the enslaving customs of the East, and with a more enviable future among a greatful and responsive people.

DR. F. E. LEE ENDS TRIP OVER FOUR PROVINCES

American Economist Consul Visits Kiangsi, Hunan, Hupeh And Anhwei

Economist Consul Frederic E. Lee, on detail at the American Consulate General here, has just returned from an investigational trip covering several weeks through the provinces of Kiangsi, Hunan, Hupeh, and Anhwei. The purpose of the trip was to investigate the economic conditions and resources of these provinces and to continue the special investigations which are being conducted in China by Dr. Lee.

Leaving Kiukiang two weeks were spent in the interior of Kiangsi Province. Going up the Kan River and its tributaries by small boat Dr. Lee visited the camphor producing regions in the south-central part of the province. Changshu, on the Kan River about the center of the province, was one of the most interesting places visited in Kiangsi. It is the most important native drug center for all China Native medicines from Tibet, Yunnan and Kwangtung are brought in by way of Kwangtung and the Kan River. Drugs from Szechuen and Hunan are brought overland through the mountains of Hunan and western Kiangsi while other drugs from North China are brought in via Hankow and Kiukiang. These drugs are mixed and repacked at Changshu and native drug buyers from all over China come to this native inland city for their supplies.

The Pingshiang collieries were reached by chair and from there Dr. Lee proceeded to Chuchow where work is being carried on the northern section of the Canton-Hankow Railway. Some days were spent at the Consulate at Changsha and at the Consulate-General at Hankow. In connection with the special investigation of the Economist Consul on currency, banking and finance in China the government mints at Wuchang and Anking were visited. Particular investigation was made in connection with the conditions in the looted cities of Wuchang and Ichang. On the return trip from Western Hupeh Dr. Lee stopped for some time at the river ports of Shasi, Yochow, Hankow, Anking, Wuhu, and Nanking.

Business conditions in the four provinces are reported as dull, due mainly to weak markets for native products and to unsettled political conditions.

Films Of Japanese Prince In London Shown In Peking

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 31.—The cinema exhibition of pictures relating to the visit of the Japanese Crown Prince to England, held at the Peking Pavilion yesterday afternoon, was attended by a large crowd of guests including men of all the Legation Guards, representatives of the Legations, Naval and Military Officers and civilians. The pictures were remarkably clear and embraced a sufficient number of varied scenes to maintain close interest throughout.

Judging by the pictures the Crown Prince has a sense of humor and the patience necessary to afford the hordes of photographers who followed in his wake ample opportunities for the exercise of their talent. Some of the ruses resorted to by these free-lance photographers were amusing. The work of the official photographers, who took films now being shown here, was obviously part of the Crown Prince's daily grind.

The appearance of King George, the Japanese Prince, the Prince of Wales, Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Miles Lampson, former secretary of Legation at Peking, who was attached to the Crown Prince during his sojourn in England, in prominent parts of the films was heartily cheered, while scenes of historical and artistic interest in London, Oxford and elsewhere, with a visit to the Lloyd Georges' at Chequers were pleasantly interspersed with imposing official functions, to which the royal visitor was conveyed in state.

Military, naval and aerial scenes completed a range of views which all possessed individual interest apart from the historical event of which they formed a part.

Chinese Navy Men In Further Protest Over Pay Arrears

Further disaffection among the officers and men of the Chinese navy owing to the continued failure of the Government to issue their pay, is reported in the Chinese press.

It will be recalled that the recent resignation of Admiral K. K. Lang from the local admiralty office followed an appeal to Peking to furnish funds for the navy personnel. The government promised to authorise one month's pay, of the six months in arrears, and the officers and men declare that the promise has not been fulfilled and have sent a representative to Shanghai with threats of drastic action unless something is done immediately.

WILMINGTON AND SOCONY TEAMS TO PLAY SHANGHAI ON SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Week-End Baseball Designed To Round Out Period Of Intensive Training For Approaching Series With Ninth Cavalry Nine

Saturday and Sunday's program of baseball has the Shanghai Baseball club opposing the team off the Gunboat Wilmington for the first day, and the new Socony Club which represents the Standard Oil Company in the Hong League on Sunday. The games will be called at 4 p.m. each day.

The week-end games, while they will furnish excellent baseball entertainment, are designed more as a rounding out of a stiff practice period for the Shanghai team before it meets the fast Ninth Cavalry nine, on August 9, for a series of six games. They are expected to put the final edge on the Shanghai team organisation for the difficult task of winning the series from the Cavalry.

Shanghai will be at practice every day this week from 5 p.m. until dark. Everything in the way of preparation for the series will be gone through from cage batting practice, with real pitching, to regular infield and outfield work.

CRIPPLES CONVALESCING

Another phase of the preparation for the approaching series, is the progress of the invalid players toward playing condition. Yesterday three cripples were out in uniform, apparently about in shape to go through a game. The men were Roeser and Hoag each with injured legs, and Bristow who broke a collar bone several weeks ago. Hopkins, also with an injured leg, while not out in uniform, showed such marked improvement that it is safe to say that he will be playing against the Cavalry.

The most serious remaining invalid is Maloney who sprained his ankle in the game Saturday against the Wilmington. But Mal is staying well away from the ball field, nursing his ankle, and promises to be strong and well again before Tuesday for participation in the big games. Crow while not yet recovered from his attack of heat and summer indisposition was well enough Sunday to drive out a homer and a triple, so he may be counted on for the big games.

Yesterday evening a big lineup of players was out for practice. The batting cage was moved back and Terry and Merrill hurled them over to the whole list for sure enough batting practice. Roeser, Bristow and Hoag each stopped the balls that the batsmen missed, and they were not so many. It was a good workout.

PLANS FOR CAVALRY SERIES

The Ninth Cavalry team is expected to arrive here Monday, August 8. The games on the 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th will be called at 4:30 o'clock. The final two games, on Saturday and Sunday, the 13th and 14th will commence at 4.

The special series between Shanghai and the Cavalry while it has entailed considerable expense to the management will have no extra cost attaching to members of the club. Tickets for non-members will be sold, at $5.00 for the series of six games. Secretary Woodrow Wilson, at No. 1 Nanking road is handling the sales. Special extra grandstands for 500 fans have been arranged for, yet it would be advisable to book tickets with Secretary Wilson beforehand. Tickets will also be on sale at the gate, for the season and for the games. The sale to non-members was made necessary by the exhaustion of the club's funds in handling interport games, and the purchase of minor equipment, in addition to the ordinary yearly expense.

The local management is also negotiating to bring to Shanghai after the Cavalry series, a strong Japanese team from North China The Business Men's team of Dairen, which is composed solidly of high-class Japanese college players is the one most likely for the second series. And later, even another team may come.

The Cavalry team in the tournament of baseball at Tientsin met the 15th Infantry nine three times in the schedule and they lost to the Army twice. Should Shanghai win over the Ninth Cavalry in the approaching series here next week, Shanghai would be left in the same position as the 15th Infantry. Should such a condition develop, and there is some likelihood that it will, Shanghai should bring the 15th Infantry team here for a series to decide the championship of China. It will be the only way.

SAYS "BUGS" Baer:

WAS IT THEORY OF RELATIVITY

Or What Was It? It Couldn't Have Been Relativity Because Gink Had No Relatives

BY "BUGS" BAER

Friends and People—I come not to praise Fowler. My man, Skillet Finn, dropped him like a hot plate. Skillet was not big and handsome like Gink. But little potatoes are hard to peel. He was small and narrow, but great adonoids! what-ta punch!

Gink came in at flyweight, Skillet came in at fly-paperweight and tangled him all up. He caught him on the wing in the third round.

Yours until drinking is compulsory,

KIRK MILLER,
Lanham, Md.

That's wrong. Gink's most velvety punch would make Skillet's wildest crash look like regal Oriental politeness. They had to keep Gink out of the Roughtown Zoo because he insisted on stroking leopards and lions the wrong way. He used a live gorilla for a penwiper.

That is the old ear oil about John Daniel. He was not the first gorilla in America. We admit that he was the first gorilla in captivity, because out in Roughtown they ran around loose as ashes. Every family had a jungle room on the premises. Gink had a pet gorilla that ate with his knife just like any other person. It was educated and tore leaves out of the best books in the Roughtown library.

After it got to be old enough to vote it got nasty. A diet of Roughtown cobblestones cured old Mr. Gorill. It got so gentle that it wouldn't bite you unless it had been properly introduced. It graduated from ordinary street brawls and was elected valedictorian to the Annual Roughtown Skullbusting Festival. The town of Riffraff was just across the river. This is the place where The Glutt lived.

Riffraff was a considerable rough place itself. True, they didn't know the delicate points of thuggery and couldn't swing a jackblack with official finesse. The Glutt was the toughest client in Riffraff. But, wandering up a Roughtown boulevard in disguise, he was beaned by a fluttering rose petal. He turned a flipflop and came down with a ready-to-wear epitaph on his borrowed vest.

Four Coast Women Will Play Tennis In East This Year

Four women tennis players will represent the Pacific Coast in the East this year. Those who have decided to make the trip are May Sutton Bundy, Mary Browne, Louise Williams and Mrs. Ellis. Mrs. Bundy and Mary Browne have been invited at the expense of the National Lawn Tennis Association, while the other two will probably go independently.

Mrs. Bundy and Mary Browne are making the trip because of the invasion of Miss Suzzane Lenglen, the French star and holder of the world's title. Miss Lenglen is now in the United States and will play in the national championship match for women as well as in several other important tournaments.

Mrs. Bundy, who as May Sutton, won the world's championship in 1904, retired from the courts in 1911. In 1915, when Molla Bjursted of Sweden, who is now Mrs. Mallory and an American citizen, came to the United States and won everything in sight, Mrs. Bundy, through the influence of her friends, decided to try her hand again. With but short notice Mrs. Bundy played against her at the Panama Exposition games and won.

Mary Browne is also answering the call from retirement. The last real tournament play of the former National titleholder was in 1917 when she toured America with Mrs. Mallory and played a series of matches to raise funds for the Red Cross.

Both Mary Browne and Mrs. Bundy have been practicing steadily for a month and are said to be in the form that won them world fame.

Experts Laud Carpentier For Showing In Big Fight

BY HARRY B. SMITH

New York, July 8.—After-the-fight gossip, of which there is not so much, with the champion retaining his title, seems divided between great admiration for the fight furnished by Georges Carpentier, of whom not so much had been expected, and wonder at the virtually perfect way in which that enormous gathering of 90,000 people was handled and the policing of the same.

There were not enough words in the English language to give the proper praise and credit for that end of the spectacle. It is pretty generally agreed by the sporting experts that they underestimated the ability of Carpentier and that, while his secret training did not produce any mysterious punches or the like, he did prove himself a better ringster than gymnasium performer.

In fact, it's my opinion that there are mighty few of our second-rate heavy-weights who would win from the Frenchman. Georges isn't so much with his left hand, to be sure, but that jumping right is a wonder, and it does execution.

Looking back over the list of heavies, I can't think of many others than Dempsey who could have weathered the storm after such a stinging right as the Frenchman landed.

GAME AS CAN BE

Georges proved that he is as game as they are made; faster than he appeared at Manhasset, and quite fast enough when he swings his left.

It was simply a case of a good little man being led to the slaughter.

Although that broken thumb and sprained wrist give an opportunity for discussion, I am of the opinion that Carpentier was due for defeat, sprained wrist or no sprained wrist. Dempsey handled his man mighty easily in the clinches, and right there is where he showed his strength, as did Jack Johnson with Jim Jeffries a few years back at Reno.

At that, Carpentier has made many friends in America—more by his courageous ring stand against such big odds than during the training, and he will be a bigcard against a man of his own weight. And now Tex Rickard will stage before the end of the year a bout between Carpentier and Tom Gibbons, the rising young heavy-weight from Minnesota, who so recently put the quietus on Willie Meehan.

Carpentier hasn't lost prestige in the eyes of his own people or of the world, for it is recognised that it was chiefly a case of his opponent being too big and rugged for him. He has had a great reception in Paris.

WILLARD NEXT IN LINE

Dempsey's plans are somewhat indefinite at this writing, though the chances are he'll take on another fight if he can get the right sort of inducement. Rickard thinks that Willard would be the best card, but says Willard would have to do a lot of training.

"And Willard is so lazy," added Tex, "that I doubt very much whether he would agree to a long siege of training. Such a bout certainly could not be whipped into shape prior to Labor day, and more likely October 12."

I asked Tex how about Wills and Dempsey.

"I don't think Dempsey would take on Wills," was the reply, "and even if he would agree to do so, I would have nothing to do with it. Another colored champion would kill the boxing game, just as it did after the Jeffries Johnson match, and I have top much money tied up in the Garden venture to want to take any such chances.

"But I would like to match Johnson and Wills for the colored heavyweight championship.

"That would be a good bout."

Dempsey, Kearns and some of their camp followers are registered at the Belmont, but neither fighter nor manager was much in evidence this morning. Dempsey says he can't remember being hit with that wicked right-hand sock in the second round, and says it couldn't have bothered him, because it left no impression on his mind.

DEMPSEY WAS HIT

However, we are all here to testify that Dempsey was hit, and that the blow appeared to stagger him, though he recovered in amazing fashion.

Personally, I didn't think Dempsey looked quite as good as he did at Toledo, but many of the critics think that was because he was more methodical and took his own time in bringing the fight to a close.

Jack Kearns told Jimmy Coffroth and myself that Dempsey could have knocked Carpentier out in the first round had he been so minded, but he was taking no chances and preferred to wear his opponent down with body punches.

As matters stand and with our present troupe of heavies, Dempsey at this writing stands out by himself, and I can't say that a return with Willard would appeal to me as being worth while. Dempsey would probably beat Jess just as easily and with as little effort as he did before.

His body punches took the fight out of Carpentier and finally brought about the knockout.

INFANTRY BEATS 9TH CAVALRY IN TIENTSIN SERIES

Army Wins In Final Game, 4-2; Takes Tourney Series By Two Out Of Three Games

The 15th Infantry baseball team made it two out of three on their series against the Ninth Cavalry nine by their win Saturday, by the score of 4-2. Hutchinson pitching for the Army was accredited almost wholly with the victory. He had the Cavalry held to four hits, and stalled off the offense by spectacular infielding.

The Cavalry was scheduled to play its last game of the Tientsin tournament on Sunday against the Civilians. The tourney was scheduled to close yesterday with the Osaka Diamonds opposing the 15th Infantry. The Cavalrymen after a trip to Peking will entrain for Shanghai to open a six-game series here on August 9, against the Shanghai Baseball Club.

AUSTRALIANS SCORE 461 AGAINST SOUTH WALES FOR 8 WICKETS; STUMPS DRAWN

Visitors Bat All Of Second Day For One Century And Several Big Scores

(Reuter's Service)

London, Aug. 1.—The match between the Australians and a representative South Wales team was continued at Swansea today in the presence of some 10,000 spectators. The weather was cloudy, and, owing to over-night rain, the wicket was soft and easy.

The Australians, whose score at close of play on Saturday stood at 50 for one wicket, batted all day and had made 461 for eight wickets when stumps were drawn.

Bardsley, in a good all-round display, contributed 122, which included a six and 13 fours, Macartney 63; Taylor 73, in a vigorous innings, including a six and ten fours, and Armstrong 76, not out.

Sporting Editor's Letter Box

The Sporting Editor,
China Press,
Shanghai.

Sir:—

An article in the Sporting Editor's Letter box, signed by "A. W." in your issue of August 2, criticising the sportsmanship of the Sailor spectators and the playing of the Wilmington team is in itself sadly lacking in the sense of fairness and good sportsmanship which "A. W." professes to upnold.

I would like to point out that all the games played between the team of the Wilmington and the Shanghai team were requested by the Shanghai team. Although they knew that they were outclassed the Wilmington accepted the invitation to play and were beaten.

They have accepted their defeat at the hands of a better team as part of the game.

After reading the article by "A. W." it is doubtful if the crew of the Wilmington will care to again expose themselves to such an attack by accepting any future games with the Shanghai team.

As long as the Umpire, a shipmate, was willing to take the "riding" he received from the sailors with a smile, it is difficult to understand "A. W.'s" criticism One can only assume that he knows little about regular baseball. It is hoped that "A. W." has few supporters because he's unfair to the baseball lovers of Shanghai.

Yours very truly,
F.S

Shanghai, Aug. 2, 1921.

Sporting Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir: I hold no brief for the 9th Cavalry. But in justice to these colored men of Uncle Sam's army, who I understand by your Sports Page, are coming to Shanghai to play a series of six games next week, it will be up to all good and true Americans to see that these men are well looked after and not subjected to the temptations and evils of this city as was the case on their first trip. As a native-born citizen of the United States of America, and an ex-member of Troop C., U.S.C. I trust and pray there will be no such scandal attached to these boys of good, old Uncle Sam as occurred on their last visit in August, 1918. Respectfully yours,
JOHN R. MONTGOMERY.

Brooklyn Contender For Kilbane's Crown

Willie Kohler, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is being hailed as the logical successor to featherweight champion Johnny Kilbane. Kohler has fought his way through the cream of his division and three times was matched with Kilbane for a title bout. Each time, however, the match was postponed or fell through. Perseverance is one of Willie's chief traits, and the youngster hopes to battle his way to the point where Kilbane can hardly refuse to give him a chance at the title.

SINGHALESE PAYS PENALTY TODAY FOR SLAYING TWO

K. Peter, Who Shot Chinese Clerks, Hangs At 8 O'clock

K. Peter, the Singhalese convicted of the murder of two Chinese shop assistants on North Szechuen Road on June 5, pays the penalty this morning at 8 o'clock when he is to be hanged at the British jail, in Amoy Road.

Peter has been confined at the British jail since his conviction on July 5, since when confirmation of sentence has been given by the British Minister and the executioner has arrived from Hongkong.

Following the hanging an inquest will be held and a report of the execution will be placed upon the court records.

Peter, it will be recalled, entered the shop on North Szechuen Road and deliberately shot the two Chinese clerks after he had been refused the exchange of a bottle of scent.

Mystery Of Death Of Chen Unsolved By Cuba Officials

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 31.—A telegram from Mr. Wu Keh-chu, Charge d'Affaires in Cuba, has been received by the Government. Mr. Wu says that the disappearance of Mr. Chen continues to be a mystery, but that he should be suspected of having been connected with the affair is still more strange. He suggests that a special commission should at once be sent to Havana to clear up the case.

The Chinese press has been full of reports of the mysterious disappearance of Chen Pei-yen, student interpreter attached to the Chinese Legation in Cuba. Foul play is suspected and certain evidence, it is alleged, by the family of the deceased, has been unearthed which implicates Wu Keh-chu, the Charge d'Affaires.

Lengthy petitions have been filed with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs by both Mrs. Chen Wu-wei, wife of the deceased and Mr. Chen Kai-chi, his father, praying for the arrest of Wu and his extradition from Cuba to stand a public trial in China.

The petitions alleged that the deceased had written several letters home describing the antagonistic attitude of Wu and threats made on his life by the Charge d'Affaires before his disappearance. Mr. Wang Chi-tseng, the minister, is also said to have reported the animosity existing between the two diplomatic officers.

Yellow River Floods Are Devastating Fields And Send Farmers To Highlands

BY JOSEF W. HALL
(Special Correspondent of THE CHINA PRESS*)*

Hankow, July 30.—The banks of the Yellow River are brimming full. A further rise of a few inches will inundate thousands of acres of the flat valley floor, but barely above water. In fact, rivermen say that the center of the current is even now at a higher level than the fields still visible on either side the river, like a cup just ready to overflow, being higher in the middle than on the edges. While the stream is high, surface tension gives it a convex surface; when it is low a concave surface, say the Chinese boatmen.

Serious devastation from flood is already reported on the upper reach of the Yangtze, above Hankow. The bed below Hankow has proved ample thus far, however, to take care of the extra quantity of water. For the past week the water has been at the 39' 9" mark at Kiukiang. This mark is reached practically every year. Any higher becomes flood. 45' has been known, but this, of course, means destruction, death and famine.

HOMES ARE INUNDATED

Even at 39' 9" many fields and some peasant homes are inundated. The tillers and inhabitants fail, however, to receive sympathy, as such a height is to be expected in all but subnormal years. The passenger on the deck of the river-steamer sees droves of pigs and chickens being driven toward the higher hinterland. The sides of the houses are unthatched, leaving but a roof on poles, which offer slight resistance to the current and are not likely to be washed away. When the flood has receded, the thatched sides will be replaced. The Chinese peasant shows his doggedness by hoeing the weeds from rows of beans whose roots already stand in the water. The only denisens of the countryside who seem to hugely enjoy the situation are the water-buffaloes. They have an immense time splashing about the formerly bone-dry farmyards. Occasionally a herd gets into excess fettle and swims off to some protruding hump, refusing to return at the summons of the exasperated herdsman.

DISASTROUS BUT BEAUTIFUL

The bank of the river is usually flanked by a stretch of land considerably lower than the bank itself. This lowland has on both sides been covered by backwater. The result makes a picturesque panorama from an eminence—say Kuling. From that mountain one sees a valley full of clearish water, separated from the yellow ribbon running down its center by long, narrow strips of green grass and trees.

Although the verdant hills and fields lining the river are refreshing to the steamer passenger's gaze, they are not so cool as they look. The passenger at this time of year spends his hours wandering back and forth between the poor comfort of the electric fan in his stateroom and the disappointing, breezeless deck. The fans wave as over swarthy bodies on the Chinese deck as continuously as the handkerchief of a farewell crowd on the wharf of a departing liner. The heat seems to be cumulative throughout the day, reaching its time of greatest torture about ten o'clock in the evening, when the weary sweltered, sleepless traveller is likely to get into that dangerous frame of mind in which he begins to ask himself what he came for and why he is here. And along about daybreak the gods of the flaming pits grant him a tiny breeze for a few hours—to revive him for the tortures of another day.

Reward Is Offered For Arrest Of Slayer In Hotel Murder Case

A warrant for the arrest of Jui Tsong-ling, suspected of the murder of a young woman at the Great Eastern Hotel on Sunday, has been issued by the International Mixed Court and the police have offered a reward of $100 for the apprehension of the accused.

Handbills bearing the photograph and full description of the man were distributed among the police stations and sent to the local Chinese police and outports yesterday.

An autopsy has been ordered to determine if the death of the girl was caused by the bullet wounds found in her left arm and thigh. It is thought probable that the wounds were not sufficiently serious to have caused death and that she may have been strangled.

How Mrs. Preston Gibson Played Hide and Seek With the Detectives

But When the Sympathetic Officers Who Were Told That She Had Been Ill in a Hospital Saw the Pictures of Her at the Venetian Ball---Well! That Was Just the Last Straw That Broke the Camel's Back!

For more than a year private detectives, process servers, attorneys, and even the sheriff of New York County, had been trying to serve a summons upon Mrs. Preston Gibson. Mrs. Gibson is now the wife of the well-known playwright and social leader. Before that she was the wife of Captain Alexander Dallas Bache Pratt, whom she divorced. She is a grand-daughter of Henry H. Rogers, the Standard Oil capitalist, and a cousin of Mrs. Caruso. Mrs. Pratt is very beautiful and, of course, has the entree into the highest circles everywhere.

Not at all the kind of lady, you would say, to be the objective of scores of detectives and process servers, and even the sheriff of New York County. And not at all the kind of light that could hide under a bushel and play hide and seek with them for over a year.

Yet, so it was. Just before Mrs. Pratt became Mrs. Gibson she had bought some jewels and had given a promissory note for $2,539 for them. She had failed to take up the note, suit had been brought and the summons had been issued ordering Mrs. Gibson to come to court and defend herself.

And for over a year all this array of officers had failed to find her and hand her that little paper.

Now, at last, in mid-November, they had closed in upon her. Serving of the summons seemed inevitable. Just then, on the morning of November 23, Assistant Deputy Sheriff William Lee received the nicest little letter from Mr. Preston Gibson, the husband. It had been written and post-marked the day previous, and read:

"Dear Mr. Lee:

"Your letter to Mrs. Gibson rec'd.

"I am sorry, but she has been quite ill in the hospital and went to the country Sat. for a rest.

"I expect she will be in town Friday. Will let you know.

"Thank you for your courtesy in the matter. Very truly yours,

"PRESTON GIBSON."

Immediately the attorneys for the prosecution were communicated with. They were sympathetic. So were all the process servers and detectives. Wouldn't it be a shame to harass any further beautiful Mrs. Gibson when she had just left the hospital and must be at the best weak and depressed?

Indeed it would, they agreed. And so they called the matter off until Friday, November 26.

On Tuesday night, November 23, the Venetian Ball, a gay rout of masks in which all fashionable society turned themselves loose, was given. And the next morning all the New York newspapers carried news of it and pictures of notable participants.

Attorneys for the prosecution, detectives, process servers and the sheriff's office each turned to their favorite paper—turned, stiffened and looked at each other, dazed

"Impossible!" exclaimed all of them.

"It can't be!" they exclaimed again.

And again they read carefully the caption under a most striking photograph of a most strikingly healthy and cheerful lady in a most striking costume.

"Well, this is the limit!" they groaned together.

For the photograph upon which they gazed was that of Mrs. Gibson, the supposedly poor, suffering lady who had just come out of the hospital! And the text under the picture very plainly stated that this was Mrs. Gibson as she had appeared at the Venetian Ball the night before, and the articles all indicated that among those present she had been one of the very merriest!

But before going more fully into the details of that harrowing disillusion and what followed close upon it, everyone will want to know, of course, how Mrs. Preston Gibson, social leader, going everywhere, flitting from Newport to New York, to Palm Beach, out West, and anywhere the fancy beckoned, shopping, dining, entertaining and being entertained everywhere, could have played hide and seek successfully for a year from all those officers of the law who were hunting her.

It was on July 18 of 1919, shortly after her divorce from "Aleck" Pratt, that the present Mrs. Gibson dropped in on an exclusive Fifth Avenue jeweller and selected some $2,500 worth of gew-gaws. She did not have the cash with her, but she was Mrs. Alexander Dallas Bache Pratt, you know—and just send the bill. The firm was dubious, very; people who headed the lists of fashion were often much harder to get to pay their bills than those who were still unknown even to the bottom of the list.

And then, frankly, Mrs. Pratt wasn't rated as an A1 credit customer in the confidential books of the guild of merchants. The money her grandfather had left her was largely tied up in a trust fund, and although it was reported that she had $300,000 a year to spend—well, the best that could be said was that she was not an A1 credit customer. Still, the firm didn't want to offend her. Maybe Madame would give a promissory note, due in two months, for the jewels; then she could take away her purchases and not be bothered with bills. Would Madame?

Madame would, and did.

Cheerfully the jewellers put the note away. If when the note came due Mrs. Pratt didn't pay, it would be easy to summon her to court and make her. So easy, they thought, with Mrs. Pratt going everywhere and being entertained everywhere and figuring all the time in the social news of the papers, which told practically day by day just what she had been doing and was going to do. Yes; they'd have no trouble in getting hold of Mrs. Alexander D. B. Pratt!

The note became due and was returned by the bank, protested, with the report that no funds could be found to pay it. A few days later Mr. Meyer Boskey, attorney for Jacques, Gems and Precious Stones, the jewellers, began legal action against Mrs. Pratt to recover the debt. A summons was issued, ordering her to appear, and defend the complaint. Until Mrs. Pratt was handed this writ, personally, or her own attorneys accepted service for her, the suit, of course, could not go on.

But that was all right, oh, yes! An experienced process server, who had served legal papers for Mr. Boskey for many years, would go right up to the Plaza, or wherever it was Mrs. Pratt was living, and hand her the summons. He hopped out, promising that he would be back long before lunch.

But he wasn't. It was a weary and puzzled process server who reported late that day that he had been everywhere and just couldn't find Mrs. Pratt anywhere. They wouldn't give him any satisfaction at the hotel, wouldn't let him wait around and, besides, he wouldn't know Mrs. Pratt if he saw her. He had been to the mansion of her father, Mr. William E. Benjamin, but the butler had said she wasn't there. He had looked in at half a dozen charity affairs, hoping to have her pointed out to him. But there had been nothing doing. Well, better luck next day, maybe.

And the next day and the next were the same.

By that time, though, the process servers—two of them were now on the job—had tried to familiarize themselves with Mrs. Pratt's appearance by studying a mass of her pictures. They began to get a little giddy. It is a curious fact that although it is said that the camera cannot lie, no two snapshots of anybody ever look quite the same, and it takes a genius like Sherlock Holmes to pick out, as a rule, the original of any of them.

So the process servers weren't helped so much by the pictures. In fact, they were hindered. After accosting various indignant ladies who denied being Mrs. Pratt and threatened to make trouble for somebody, and "as for such impudence, they never did hear of such a thing," the writ servers developed a strain of super-caution. Several times they were sure that it was Mrs. Pratt who stepped into a high-power car that she drove herself, but the car was too quick for them to follow.

Yet Mrs. Pratt was certainly all around town. Down in Attorney Boskey's office a new department had been formed, whose sole duty it was to go over every newspaper, magazine and society journal to try to find clues to her.

And just about this time Mrs. Pratt ran away to Greenwich with Preston Gibson and was married by a justice of the peace there. The papers were full of it and the subsequent rupture of relations between herself and her parents, who couldn't see twice-divorced Mr. Gibson at all as a son-in-law, and made no bones about coming right out in the papers and saying so. Now and then a reporter got to Mrs. Gibson, the former Mrs. Pratt, but the process servers—never. She certainly seemed to have an uncanny way of keeping out of their way.

And This Is Mrs. Gibson in One of the Swift Automobiles That the Process Servers Couldn't Follow.

This Is the Picture of Mrs. Preston Gibson—So Apparently Happy and Bouncingly Healthy—That Met the Amazed Eyes of the Officers the Morning After Her Husband Had Written Them That the Poor Pursued Lady Had Been Quite Ill in the Hospital.

Mr. Preston Gibson.

They tell a story of a swain who came a-courting his girl. When he rang the bell her brother appeared and threw him down the steps. He went right back and her father did the same thing to him. He tried again and they both threw him into the street. And as he was going up the steps for a fourth time he stopped. An idea had struck him.

"Well, I'll be switched," he said. "I don't believed they want me in that house."

Like that suitor, the attorneys for the jewelers decided that Mrs. Pratt didn't want to be served with that writ!

So the harassed officers in pursuit of her called in the aid of private detectives. They also, as Attorney Boskey was later to tell in the affidavit to the Supreme Court of New York, "continued to try to find her whereabouts by making inquiries at different newspapers, different hotels, agencies and magazines devoted to so-called society news, but without success."

They also continued to telephone, as well as to write letters, to Mr. Eliot Norton, whom they had discovered to be attorney for Mrs. Gibson, but without authority to accept service for her of the writ.

The poor old writ! It was getting pretty badly mussed up and decrepit by this time with all the constant handling! A nice, new, clean one took its place.

The detectives didn't have any luck. As Mr. Boskey says, "They were on their honeymoon and that made it harder, because naturally where they had gone would be kept secret and none of her friends seemed to know. Ordinarily it is easy to trace so well-known a person's whereabouts through acquaintances"—but, well, this was certainly different.

Then the subpoena began traveling. Mr. Norton had written that "Mrs. Gibson resides in Newport, R. I. Since I believe that is her legal residence, any mail addressed to her there will be forwarded wherever she may be."

Right up in the mails went the summons to Newport, addressed to Attorney Boskey's correspondents there. And back it came with a letter, saying that "Mrs. Preston Gibson has not been in Newport this Summer. I am informed she is in California and is not coming here. I have had several writs in the hands of the sheriff for service upon her, and as yet have not been able to make service because of her absence."

Off to California went the writ. And thereafter, like Mary's famous little lamb, wherever Mrs. Gibson was reported to be there the writ was sure to go—Palm Beach, Coronado, White Sulphur Springs.

As Attorney Boskey somewhat wearily puts it:

"The Gibsons surely traveled about a good deal. No sooner would we learn that she really was in Newport and get in touch with an agent there, when we would learn from him that he had tried to serve the subpoena and that she had left town. Next day he might find that she was really back in town or hadn't actually left. California was worse. It takes four days at the quickest to get a letter through, and by the time the summons reached our agents there she would be stopping somewhere else!"

In October of last year, after twelve full months of this hide and seek, the Gibsons came definitely back to New York and settled down temporarily at No. 64 East Sixtieth street.

Right away Mr. Boskey telephoned. Mr. Gibson answered.

Mr. Gibson wanted to know what it was all about, anyway. Gasping a little at this, Mr. Boskey explained and launched into a recital of his year's efforts. Mr. Gibson, intimating that he had no time to listen to the story of anybody's life, wanted to know what Mr. Boskey wanted, anyway. Mr. Boskey, controlling himself with dreadful effort, repeated that he wanted to serve the summons. Mr. Gibson doubtfully answered that he'd have to ask Mrs. Gibson about that.

After a while he came back and reported that Mrs. Gibson wouldn't consent to be served and advised Mr. Boskey to call up Mr. H. Freeman, of East Twenty-eighth street, who was Mrs. Gibson's agent.

Mr. Freeman said he was arranging Mrs. Gibson's finances as best he could, but that she didn't have a cent to pay the debt at the present time; wouldn't have until the litigation which she had started against her father was settled. Mr. Boskey needn't have any fear about Mrs. Gibson going away though. She had taken a five-year lease on a house at No. 159 East Sixty-third street, New York. Mr. Freeman was very discouraging about service. Mrs. Gibson didn't want to be annoyed by service, he said; there wasn't any use trying, for she wouldn't permit herself to be served or allow anybody to enter her apartments, or stick around the hotel; in fact, she had given strict instructions to this effect to the management.

Mr. Boskey thought all this over. If Mrs. Gibson had money enough to take an expensive house up in the Sixty-thirds she certainly had enough to pay that jeweler's bill! But, also, Mr. Freeman had gone quite fully into the details of the litigation between Mrs. Gibson and her father. Mr. Boskey did a little detective work of his own. He had the various complaints and affidavits on file looked up and their dates recorded. And what Mr. Boskey said and thought when he saw that day after day when his poor process had been travelling from Newport to New York and back again and to California and Palm Beach, Mrs. Gibson had been right in New York signing those papers!

This was too much! He sought the aid of the Sheriff of New York. Assistant Sheriff Lee started out to serve the summons. He met suave Mr. Gibson. Mr. Gibson promised to let him meet Mrs. Gibson. Time after time he promised.

After a while the sheriff's goat, figuratively speaking, began bleating loudly, joining the lusty chorus of those others who had tried before him. He sent a peremptory demand for a show down, and it was in answer to it that he received that sweetly mild letter from Mr. Gibson quoted at the beginning. It was a good letter and it touched everybody. All the officers from the Sheriff down had a clear mental image of a poor, pallid woman being carried out of a hospital into an automobile and going to some quiet, restful shelter to try to recover strength enough to come to town on Friday and accept at last that summons. They wouldn't disturb her, no.

They came down to their offices next morning with a strong sense of virtue and approving consciences. They had withheld the club of the law from the head of the weak, they had tempered justice with mercy and had succored the suffering.

Reading over the society columns had by this time become a habit, however, and quite naturally they turned to accounts of the Venetian ball, a dazzling, gorgeous, colorful and noisy rout which had begun early the night before and ended late that morning. All the beauty and chivalry of New York fashionable society had been there and the newspapers had given quite a lot of space to it. They skimmed over the details and then suddenly their attention was riveted, one by one. They had come across a name!

Mrs. Preston Gibson!

Yes—Mrs. Preston Gibson had been at the Venetian ball!

Mrs. Gibson, whose husband had written that "she has been quite ill in the hospital and went to the country Sat. for a rest" had not only been there, but if reports were true had been one of the jolliest, gayest, happiest of them all.

And to clinch the reports there were actually pictures of her as she had looked at the ball. They scanned the photographs minutely. Mrs. Gibson appeared plump and well fed, almost buxom. No trace of illness in her figure. And no trace of it or need of rest in the dazzling smile the camera had caught! Very well and fit, indeed, did Mrs. Gibson look in her costume; while the costume itself bore evidence of costing well nigh as much as was called for by the suit the weary and worn subpoena was to institute.

Down with mercy! Let justice be done and the chips fall where they might!

Attorney Boskey sent to the Supreme Court of New York an affidavit in which he set forth the various moves in Mrs. Gibson's game of hide and seek with the subpoena, and ended it with the exhibits of Mr. Gibson's letter to the Sheriff, the newspaper clippings of the Venetian ball and Mrs. Gibson's published photographs in connection with it. He asked that the Supreme Court put an end to this "deliberate evasion" of service by allowing service of the summons simply by leaving it at Mrs. Gibson's home.

And Justice Geigerich promptly issued an order allowing such service.

Now Mrs. Gibson will have to come into court or settle.

SOUTHERN CITIES ORDERED TO PUT IN PLAYGROUNDS

Kaying Schools Close When Scores Die From The Bubonic Plague

(China Press Correspondence)

Kaying (Kwangtung), July 25.—A recent order has come from the government at Canton to tear down the city wall and build a wide road instead. The same order requested the local authorities to find several plots of ground in order to establish playgrounds for the use of the children of the city.

The election of the Kaying magistrate according to the new system will take place next month. According to the rules of the election each voter must work three days on the new Swatow Kaying highway, or else pay a road tax of 60 cents, the money to be used for the same purpose. A list of the voters has been posted on the city wall.

An outbreak of bubonic plague caused all Kaying schools to close in early June. It is very difficult to secure statistics about the number of deaths but it is safe to say that several score of people have lost their lives because of this disease during the past few months. Most of the drug shops in the city carry anti-plague vaccine but the charge of 60 cents per person prevents many people from taking advantage of it.

CARRIED BY RAT FLEAS

According to a foreign doctor in Kaying innoculation helps greatly in warding off death, but doesn't render people entirely immune. The first stage in the disease is the dying of large numbers of rats from the plague. Fleas which leave the dead rats are very dangerous as their bite generally means death within a fortnight. For this reason the discovery of dead rats causes great concern.

Kaying is the educational and cultural center for a large number of Hakka people. It is estimated that 95 percent of the boys here attend school. There are more than 1,000 middle school students at present in Kaying. The present government and mission schools find it impossible to admit students in such large numbers. As a result of the influx of so many students facilities in housing and class room have been greatly taxed. The demand for English here is very great. Hundreds of Hakkas go abroad every year to go into business where English is used.

It is doubtful if there is another place in China where education is so much thought of as here. There are practically no Kaying men that cannot read and write. On the other hand they are not fond of hard work. Most of the outdoor work is done by women.

The new government at Canton is very popular here. Public gambling has been absolutely prohibited since last December. Before that everything was wide open. The use of opium is greatly curtailed, but it is difficult for a Chinese government to handle this trade when it is controlled largely by foreigners. Everywhere General Chen Chuing-ming is held in highest esteem by the Kwangtung people. The outcome of the war with Kwangsi is awaited with great interest, but no great apprehension is felt in these parts.

U.S. Navy To Be Cut To 100,000 Men

(U. S. Navy Radio through Reuter)

Washington, Aug. 1.—Twelve thousand Navymen will be discharged from the Navy soon in order to reduce the personnel to 100,000. The Navy Department today ordered the discharge, upon request, of all men whose enlistments expire before July, 1922, with the exception of radio, torpedo and engine experts, machinists, mates, coppersmiths, bandsmen, hospital corps men and signalmen.

50 Mile Oil Field Found In Alaska

(U. S. Navy Radio through Reuter)

Anchorage (Alaska), Aug. 1.—The discovery is reported of what is said to be a high grade of seepage oil near Anchorage. There are indications that the field extends for fifty miles northward.

Stampeeders are already staking claims.

British Airship Service Near End

(Reuter's Service)

London, Aug. 1.—In the House of Commons today at question time, Capt. F. E. Guest, Secretary for Air, stated that the airship service would be discontinued from today.

Failing a contrary decision by the Imperial Conference, no provision for airships would be made in next year's estimates unless this policy was changed.

House Rent Dispute Before British Court

Action To Recover Tls. 1,575 Filed By J. T. Hammond Against Enno Wellmann

Preliminary hearing of a suit filed by Mr. J. T. Hammond against Mr. Enno Wellmann for the sum of Tls. 1,575 alleged to be due as house rent was held yesterday in the British Supreme Court before Judge Peter Grain, Assistant Judge. Mr. T. Wing is appearing for the plaintiff and Mr. P. W. Goldring represents the defendant.

In his affidavit Mr. Hammond alleges that the Tls. 1.575 claims due represents house rent for seven months for a residence located at 491 Avenue Joffre. In the reply, he presented to the Court, Mr. Wellmann recited that under an agreement dated August 30, 1920 he rented the house for a period of 12 months at a monthly rental of Tls. 225. He alleges that on December 30 the plaintiff terminated or sought to terminate the agreement by a notice in writing and refused to accept the rental payment for January, 1921. He alleges further that the plaintiff holds a deposit of Tls. 900 made when the agreement was drawn and has refused to return it. The defendant also makes a claim of damages for alleged failure of the plaintiff to keep the premises in repair in accordance with the terms of the lease.

PILGRIM IDEA TO COVER WORLD IS HARDING THEME

International Peace Nearer By Seeds Of Tolerance Planted In 1620

(Reuter's Service)

Plymouth (Mass.), August 1.—The celebrations in honor of the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers reached a climax today with the arrival of President Harding aboard the yacht Mayflower, escorted by six destroyers.

A hundred thousand people witnessed the parade, portraying incidents of the original landing. The British cruiser Cambrian was among the assemblage of warships in the harbor and the British Naval Attache represented the British Embassy.

In the course of an address, President Harding said he hoped that the forthcoming disarmament conference would bring the world a new era of peace and freedom. He characterised the international situation as "more than promising," adding that the seeds of tolerance and understanding which had been planted by the Pilgrim Fathers were beginning to bear fruit a thousandfold internationally.

Your Health Comes First

Good Health is your most valuable asset—its preservation should, therefore, receive your most careful consideration. An important point which should always be borne in mind is the fact that a great many forms of ill-health can be traced, directly or indirectly, to disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is wise, therefore, to keep these organs in healthy activity. When they show any signs of derangement let that reliable medicine, Beecham's Pills, be taken at once. Always deal with digestive ailments in time. They are far-reaching in their possibilities of mischief if neglected, as they too often are. And yet it is generally easy to keep fit and well and free from many debilitating ailments by the simple use of

MARCH OF EVENTS

BY BRUCE HOPPER

NOW that America has accepted woman suffrage as bride until chaos do them part there seems to be a singularly masculine indifference on the part of the one towards the achievements and laurels of the other.

A congresswoman, Alice M. Robertson of Oklahoma, actually wielded the most exalted gavel in the House of Representatives, and called "Uncle Joe" Cannon, and his younger fellow legislators unquestionably to order. The clock then struck twelve for suffrage, and began a newer, and still more glorious day.

All the men are still wondering why all the women are congratulating each other. Men seldom understand.

The serenity with which the public received this tremendous news recalls the red letter days on the suffrage calendar. The presidential election of 1872 was an event in suffrage self determination, for was not Susan B. Anthony fined $100 for illegal voting in Rochester, N. Y.?

The first congresswoman, Miss Jeanette Rankin of Montana, faced an ordeal for suffrage on April 6, 1919, when President Wilson asked Congress to declare war on Germany. Her response at the roll call was: "No!" and burst into tears. Her voice echoed around the world. Lady Astor's maiden speech in the House of Commons was heralded abroad as the wisdom of Solon, and her subsequent speeches bear out the first impression. Other events are known, but have been struck from the suffrage calendar, such as the startling action of a woman legislator in Oregon voting against a bill she had introduced.

But the world has drifted far on the wonder stream of suffrage, and refuses to be impressed by the significance of a woman occupying the Speaker's chair in the Lower House. This same world may awaken some day to acclaim a woman president of the United States. But even that may not be alarming, for the tendency today is making politics to man a thing apart, but woman's whole existence.

THAT Siberian gold fever shall become a universal disease is the decision reached by the Far Eastern Republic. New rules for private exploitation of gold mines have been disseminated from Chita to all parts of the world. Wherever old prospectors congregate to sigh for the thrilling days of bacon and beans, of washing the creek sand for yellow metal, of shoveling gravel into the mercury riffles of a "Long Tom" washer, there will the promise of Soviet protection to mines be placed, and most likely read.

In capitulating to the old order of ownership and concession the Soviets have done more to restore confidence than by tons of propagandist literature. They now sit and wait for the natural gravitation of capital toward unexploited fields. Another Klondike rush is expected.

An interesting bit of news for those who are tempted to go gold hunting is that Siberia has abolished the death penalty.

THE immortal Dante is at last to have a tomb fitting to the universal esteem lavished upon his memory. Italy is spread with garlands of the highest tribute she can pay to one of the greatest of poets. Ravenna, the city of his exile from Florence during the Ghibelline-Guelph factional war, has the honor of site for the tomb. But all the other major cities contribute bronze and silver bells. The Italian Army brings silver wreaths, and Rome the great bronze doors. The celebrations of the six hundredth anniversary of the poet's death will continue for three months.

The spirit of Dante is still in the streets of unchanging Florence. The tourist lingers near the end of Ponte Vecchio where he watched Beatrice pass, never daring to speak. The scholars admire Dante for the Divine Comedy, but the human heart of the world loves Dante for his holy, passionate adoration of Beatrice. No other love story can compare with it.

All honor to Dante. He of all men earned immortality.

THE NATIONAL GAS WORKS

It is said that on one occasion the Duke of Marborough, who recently married Miss Gladys Deacon, met an old countrywoman in the neighborhood of Westminster. She asked him to point out some of the famous sights. After drawing her attention to Westminster Abbey, he pointed out the Houses of Parliament.

"Well, if that ain't a fine building!" she exclaimed; "I suppose it ain't the gas works?"

"It is indeed, madam," was the Duke's prompt reply. "That is the gas works of the whole British nation."

PLAIN ENGLISH

Admiral Sims, one of the most popular Americans to visit the British Isles, always travels about with a twinkle in his eye and a bundle of anecdotes in his pocket. On his recent visit to England he told a story of a tired and hungry American soldier who arrived at a French village one day and encountered a "mademoiselle."

"Say!" he exclaimed. "Parlez vous Anglais?"

"Yes, a lettle," replied the French girl.

"Gee! Ain't that great!" cried the American. "Say, now, where can a guy line up against some good eats in this burg?"

THE SUMMER

How full of pleasure to abide within the summer eventide—to sizzle with the heat o' nights and suffer from mosquito bites!

Upon the pond I seek a breeze, or sit beneath magnolia trees. The bold mosquitos come apace and try to drive me from the place. They buzz me here and sting me there, and make me wish them!!! —anywhere. The more I kill the more they come to buzz and bite and bite and hum.

How restful are the heated nights, so zephyrless and full of bites!

Oh! what a pleasure to be here in this! Says the mosquito: "O what bliss!"

THE MORNING AFTER

Lord Rossmore's book, "Things I can tell," is full of good stories. Here is one of them: Two men had attended an exceedingly lively dinner, and both had done themselves proud. They encountered each other the following morning. Both felt very cheap, but each thought it his bounden duty to endeavor to appear chirpy.

"Mornin,' old chap!" said one.

"Morn—," replied the other.

"Awfully jolly time last night!"

"Ra-ather!"

"Had any breakfast?" asked the first speaker.

"Of course I have!" answered the other.

"What did you have?"

"Oh, the usual thing—a chop."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the first diner out, "Anything else?"

"Yes, a double whiskey and soda —and a dog."

"A dog!" exclaimed the astonished questioner. "What on earth did you want with a dog?"

"Why, to eat the chop, you fool!"

English Leader Of Miners Points Out The Aims Of The Working Class

BY R. C. FELD
(New York Times)

One of the people whom the coal strike of England brought to the fore is Duncan Graham, Labor M. P., who represents a mining constituency in Scotland. At the outbreak of the strike it was he who stood up in the House of Commons and told its members just what the miners wanted and how far they would go to get it. Today he is looked upon as the spokesman of the workers and as the leader of the Labor Party in the future.

In his first speech, made on April 6, he succinctly stated the principle for which the miners were fighting. Quite frankly antagonistic to Lloyd George, he said in the course of his address:

"The status quo on all the men going back on the old wages; and we are quite prepared to consider that if the Prime Minister is prepared to offer it. He wants to be clear of any responsibility. All the advantages are to be on your side, all the disadvantages on ours. I will be quite frank with you: we are not going to have that. I am a miner, and I am not prepared to accept the conditions, and I will fight as long as I possibly can against it, and I will urge everybody belonging to my occupation—notwithstanding your regulations—to fight as bitterly as he possibly can against any attempt to force us back into 1914 conditions."

The words sound incendiary, but Mr. Graham is not. The writer had an interview with him on the very broad question of what is on labor's mind today, quite apart from the strike. Mr. Graham is a Scotchman who speaks in the language of Robert Burns. It is the language of the man of the people, with its "I can na say," and "It wouldna be right." As he said in his speech, he is a miner, and knows whereof he speaks when he talks of conditions and their reaction on the worker's mind. He began working in the mines of Scotland in 1878 when he was less than 11. For fourteen years he did the heavy pick and shovel work. In 1892 he was promoted to the job of check weigher. He stayed at this work until 1908, when he became political organiser of the Scotland miners. All this time he had been actively engaged in the trades union movement, and in 1918, as a result of his work in trades union and political organisation, together with his first-hand experience in the mines, he was sent up to Parliament. Little, however, had been heard of him up to the present.

"You want to know what is on labor's mind today," he began. "Many things; but first and foremost a firm resolution that nothing will make them go back to the pre-war standards of living. To maintain the standards which the war has brought —that is the only constructive thing it has brought—labor will fight until the last ditch. Mind ye, it is not as a war reward that it is seeking to keep those conditions, but as a step in labor reform, in evolution, which would have come in time anyway, but which the war has accelerated by a number of years.

REFORM AND EDUCATION

"Let me explain. Labor reform is built primarily on education of the working classes and education of the middle class mind. Up to 1870 we had no education for the working classes. At that time or thereabouts the first compulsory education law was passed. For the first time in English history a boy in the mining districts of Scotland, let us say, could not, according to law, go to work before he was 12 years old. His education was finished at 10. But, if he were above the average, and completed more than the required amount of learning in less than the required amount of time, he could go to work before he was 12. I was fortunate enough to be one of those. I went into the mines before I was 11. Since then education laws have been continually improved, so that the man who wants an education today can get it. There have been many who have wanted it, and many who have got it.

"Not the least important result of the enacting of education laws was the change in the attitude of the public at large toward the worker. The fact that education laws were being passed showed the people, the middle class, if you will, to how great an extent labor was really suffering. Public opinion, if you will, fought the demands of labor on economic grounds, but on moral grounds it was attracted to them. The friction between the two attitudes of mind was not bad. It made for progress. For the last twenty-five years there has been a steady upward movement on the part of labor to better its conditions of living. And, generally speaking, that movement has not been unaided by the public, who are out of the movement, but not unaffected by it.

"Along with this progressive educational movement there came a change in labor leadership. The old inarticulate leader who felt things were wrong, who sensed things were wrong, but who could not scientifically analyse the wrongness of them, went, and in his stead came the trained, well-educated labor man. First in his constructive movements of reform came the organisation of a political party. He felt that sound industrialism depended on sound political expression. The Independent Labor Party was organised in 1893. That gave way to the Labor Party of today, which came into being in 1900. Direct action of labor in England began to have new meaning. It meant political action versus former methods of strikes and wrangles. It meant also that an industrial constituency instead of putting up a Conservative M. P. or a Liberal M. P., as was more of ten done, could turn to their own leaders, their own kind, and get the sort of labor representation and legislation they wanted and needed.

"Standards of living, of working conditions, of hours and wages were things in which the labor leaders, political as well as industrial, were interested. Those were the things uppermost in the minds of their constituents, the workers in the mines, the factories, the railroads. The change from old methods to new, from old attitudes of mind to new, from old standards to new, was not rapid. First of all labor leaders had to give voice to the need of change, public opinion had to be aroused to an appreciation of conditions as they were existing, and only after the awakening of public opinion came the awakening of the labor mass. I am certain the change came about in that fashion.

"The point is, however, that by 1900 we had passed the three stages, and that labor was awakened. It became conscious of the shortcomings of its manner of existence and decided to change them. It was not, however, revolutionary in its attitude. Determined as it was that standards must be raised, it knew nevertheless that it would take time in which to effect the change. The years up to 1914 were directed to that aim.

"And then the war came. Something very startling happened then. The thing toward which labor was steadly working came overnight.

RELIANCE ON LABOR

"Everybody turned to labor to keep the nation going while the men were fighting in France. Wages went up, standards of living went up, the working men and women 'found themselves' for the first time in their lives. More; so great was the need for co-operation between all branches of government and industry that the man in the shop discovered that he was a very important entity in the machinery of which he had formerly considered himself an unimportant cog.

"In order to facilitate matters, and insure the greatest production and the least waste, joint boards of control were organised. The Government took over the control of industry, and ran it through bodies representing the workers and the owners. For the first time in the history of the country, labor sat at the same table with the former controllers of industry, and managed the machinery of running the nation's business. Something happened to the worker's mind right at that point. He discovered that the man who sat opposite him was not by virtue of his superiority of birth also superior in judgement and ability, and that the strange business of running a plant was not given to those who had a special calling or gift in that direction, but was a matter of circumstances, governed heretofore by heredity mostly. The worker found himself in the unique position, in a word, where he was more than a little important in the directing of industry, and found to his own surprise that he had the ability to do it. The knowledge was not unpleasant to him, and he began assiduously to devote himself to the study of industrial representation, industrial control, Government representation, Government control, and the score of other things which his new position made it necessary for him to learn.

"There were, as I have explained, joint boards of control. There were in addition consumers' councils where labor, capital and the consumer, directed by the Government, sat together to determine matters of food control and distribution. There were other fields of activity into which labor, by the action of Government, was catapulted. And the important and startling point was that labor, instead of being overwhelmed by its new duties, reponsibilities and powers, walked unafraid and accomplished everything and more than was asked of it. Labor experiments of a kind that the most far-seeing leaders had dreamed about as happening in years to come were precipitated into the war situation and found to be sound. In four years labor had taken strides that in peace times it would have taken many times fours years for it to accomplish.

"The war ended. Everybody spoke of returning to peace conditions. It was right that they should; but, unfortunately, to a good many people returning to peace conditions meant retracing the steps of progress and evolution and starting where we had left off in 1914; to begin life over again as though nothing had happened in the four war years; to fight all over again for the ideals and standards we had attained, as though we had never tasted the things toward which we had always been working; to be willing to go on at the old jog trot, and get in 1930 or '40 the which we had had in 1918. And first and foremost in this effort to go back to peace conditions as the popular slogan has it, is the attempt to cut wages to the sorry level at which they were in 1914.

POVERTY IN ENGLAND

"You in America have no conception of what 1914 wages were in England. How any family could live on them I do not know. Or rather, I do know, and knowing, would see the country overrun by strikes rather than have the workers of the country go back to that. Politically, we are far ahead of you when it comes to industrial expression, but economically we are years behind. Our employers say they cannot pay our men the wages yours get because our plants are not run on the same high plane of science and organisation that yours are. It doesn't seem to me that it is right that the worker should pay for the admitted inefficiency and outworn methods to which the English owner of industry clings. What's more, the worker, made conscious of his strength, refuses to do it.

"There are other contributing facts in this situation, all of them finding their roots in the war. The boy of eighteen, a decade or two ago was satisfied with very little. During the war the boy of eighteen was

Why Belong To The Wealthy Class?

Statistics recently issued tell the palpitating world that, in America, forty million people are living from hand to mouth.

It is not stated how many are living from knife to mouth, but we must draw our own conclusions.

This report means that in perhaps twelve or fifteen million homes the goldfish don't know where they are to get their next meal and the flivver doesn't know where it is going to get its next drink of gasoline. The phonographs do not know, but they are taking their last whirl at life, and the fireless cookers do not know how soon they will have to go into permanent retirement with empty stomachs.

The forty million may be referred to as the more or less poor.

At least, they are not rich and why, indeed, should they be? Has anybody ever figured out any distinct advantage of being possessed of overpowering wealth? A multi-millionaire is obliged to put on a hard-boiled shirt and a dress suit every evening, hot or cold, and sit down with a room full of people he has never seen before and hopes he will never see again. The poor man can jump into a pair of greasy overalls and go out and monkey with his differential or try to teach his vegetable oysters how to talk.

The multi-millionaire is a mark for designing ladies and blackmailers. If a poor man takes a side glance at a manicure in a barber-shop window his wife hands him a wallop with the ham she is carrying home for the Sunday dinner, and that settles that. If he has two dollars to spare he has to buy something for the Ford, and his idea of riotious living is a new straw hat every two years.

The multi-millionaire owns a steam yacht, and what a man with fifty million dollars and a steam yacht can do to pass away the time would make Jules Verne turn green with envy. When the bird who is living from hand to mouth wants to take a sea trip he gathers the family and climbs aboard an excursion boat where the people are packed in so tight that he cannot lift his hat to a strange lady even if he wants to. The man who is living from hand to mouth is safeguarded on every side. He has all the freedom of a goldfish.

The Wall Street wiz has to call in fourteen experts to figure out his income tax and then lie awake nights for fear the Government will get hep. The hand-to-mouther merely writes a note to the Government and says: "I have figured it all out and you owe me $17.50. Please remit by return mail," and goes on hoeing his garden and hitching up his trousers on the side where the suspender button is off.

When the grand jury meets and the ocean liners are thronged by multis who are, if necessary, willing to go steerage, the hand-to-mouth citizen hops blithely aboard a surface car where all the deputy sheriffs in town can see him and rides to his work smiling genially upon one and all, and he can walk right up to a policeman and count the buttons on his coat and ask the way to the Aquarium without a flutter. No grand jury would know what to do with him if it got him.

When stocks hit the bottom and fortunes are wrecked this poor greezer can warble: "Let 'em flicker," and he can lie in his hammock under his own vine and fig tree and read of the sorrowful divorce court doings of Jason W. Podsnap, president of the Steenth National Bank and know that those things will never happen to him.

Why belong to the wealthy class—especially when you haven't got the money?

An Astronomer Turns Lens On Invisible

(Death and its Mystery. By Camille Flammarion. Century Company)

The attentive reader can no longer doubt the existence of the soul and its purely psychic faculties. Before the knowledge of telepathy, in past ages, they attributed these sorts of warnings to angels or demons, or, fifty years ago, to disembodied spirits. Today we can think that there is telepathic transmission from brain to brain; that cerebral waves overcome distance. This is possible, but it is also possible that the science of the future will smile at our present theories as we smile at those of the ancients. Whatever may be the explanation, premonitory dreams, visions of the future, are authentic investigations have confirmed them. . . To solve the mystery of death we first had to prove that the soul exists, individually, an existence proved by special, extra corporeal faculties which cannot be included among the properties of the material brain or among chemical or mechanical reactions; faculties essentially spiritual, such as the will, acting without the spoken word; auto suggestion, producing physical effects; presentiments, telepathy, intellectual transmissions, reading in a closed book, the sight by the spirit of a far off country, of a future scene or event—all phenomena outside the sphere of our physical organism, lacking any common measure with our organic sensations and prov- that the soul is a substance which exists in itself."

So concludes the eminent French astronomer after some forty years of investigation, during which time he has studied and verified hundreds of cases of abnormal psychic manifestations. This present volume consists mostly of records of these extraordinary occurrences, with names, dates and witnesses; in many cases the evidence is so complete that the reader must either admit the fact or believe that an immense number of seemingly matter of fact people are really fantastically insane.

Beyond any reasonable doubt, there are people who do things that ordinary folks can't do every day with our ordinary senses, which certainly proves that there is more in the universe than the well known and obvious bodily activities. Whether this extra something is only a more elaborate form of chemical reaction or is a psychic force existing on its own is the question at issue. One may, perhaps, be permitted to observe that both the materialists and the believers in psychic force like Dr. Flammarion and Dr. Geley have to jump a certain logical gap in stating dogmatically that the facts prove this or that. Nine-tenths of the world believes that we are souls living in our bodies, and everybody acts in practice as if he believed in his own mental existence, so the burden of proof certainly rests heavily on the materialists. On the other hand, if these weird, abnormal spooks must sing in our ears to prove that we have souls, how about those of us who never have any spooks? If every human being has, or rather is, a spiritual person inhabiting a physical body there ought to be qualities common to the lot of us which indicate the fact.

One is inclined to think that it is more by the study of the spiritual factulties of the normal person that a convincing theory may be finally built up to explain what we are and why we act the way we do. Books such as this of Dr. Fammarion's may be useful in upsetting the two easy explanations of the mechanist school. But the less startling work of men like Josiah Royce and William James will probably leave more of a residue in the thought of those future philosophers who perhaps will solve the riddle of the universe.

British Labor Ideal

made to feel that he was a man, and had to do the work of a man. Today he is demanding the rewards of a man's work, and when he says man's work he means more than the rewards with which his father might have been satisfied twenty years ago. He means the rewards, or more truly speaking, wages, of a man who was called upon to show his strength during the war, and did not fail in the doing of it.

"What is on the worker's mind, you ask? Many things," but first and foremost—and you can put that in italics—the maintenance of his present standard of living. No section of the country will go back without a struggle to the standards of 1914. The miners' strike is the first evidence of that. There will be other evidences just as soon as there are other attempts to jam the worker back into the hole in which he found himself in 1914. Call it what you will, strikes, as the employing class call them; lockouts, as we do; stoppages, as the Government does, it all means he same. There will be no work until labor is assured that it can maintain the standards which it has proved it is justified in demanding.

"We cannot go backward; we must go forward. Given American economic standards and our political standards, labor in England will be set on the high road to industrial soundness and peace. Without that combination, I can see nothing ahead for the country but a succession of labor disputes, which can in no way help the country to regain is footing as an industrial nation.

"One thing more. The contention is brought forward by capital, or let us say the employing body, that the lowering of wages will mean the lowering of the cost of living. That contention can no longer be made with the hope that labor will swallow it. Labor knows better. It has sat, as I have said, on joint industrial boards, and knows how the wheels go round. It is ready to sit on joint industrial boards today and will, while maintaining the standards of today, bring down the cost of living to a rational level without undue hurt to either the man who owns the factory, the man working for him, or the ultimate consumer. Labor is convinced that the organisation of such boards, made up of representatives of capital, labor and the consuming body, is the answer to the cost of living question. It is thinking hard on that when it is not fighting hard for the thing threatened at the moment—the maintenance of proper standards of living."

The Peril of being Beautiful!
It Wasn't that she Didn't Love Her Husband!

Lina Cavalieri plays the part in this great picture of a daughter of Eve whose beauty was far too great for the safety of her own heart or the men's she encountered.

It wasn't that she did not love her husband, but simply that she drew other men to her almost unconsciously as the candle-flame does the poor doomed moth. And some of the moths were mighty dangerous.

"A Woman of Impulse" will stir you deeply by its likeness to the problems of Love as you know them.
